A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

The chainless bicycle seems likely to set in motion the endless chain of litigation.

The only sort of autonomy Cuba will be willing to accept is one of the Fourth of July kind.

The Nebraska man who was stabbed with a hat pin is going to marry the girl. She must have touched his heart.

"When is the best time to marry?" was voted on by a Kansas women's club by secret ballot, and it was unanimously decided that any old time was the best.

The contrast between the Japanese and Chinese was never more strikingly illustrated than in the cable reports of the superstitious dread of the Chinese emperor over the coming eclipse in January.

The courts are getting into a great tangle over that whiskey bond for Alaska. A good way to decide the whole matter would be to order all the interested parties to shake dice for it.

In Wayne, Nebraska, the other day three former husbands of the same wife met and called upon her and her present spouse. A pleasant reunion followed, and it was decided to hold an annual convention every fall.

A small boy teased his father for a watch till he was forbidden to mention the matter again. At the family prayers next morning, when asked for his Scripture verse, the youngster repeated: "What I say unto you I say unto all—watch."

A Springfield, Mo., boy carried a stick of dynamite to school the other day. As soon as they can get the victims buried, build a new school house, and hire another teacher, the glorious work of educating the youth of that town will be resumed.

The queen of Portugal recently gave the court ladies an object lesson on the dangers of tight lacing. She had a number of them photographed by the X ray. The picture showed such great disfigurement that a reform instantly followed in the matter of lacing.

An Illinois farmer prayed for two weeks for rain to fall upon his parched fields, but no moisture came. Then, while gazing upon his blistering crops, the spirit moved him and he swore fearfully, and that night it began to rain and kept it up for three days.

Paul Dana will succeed his father in charge of the New York Sun. It was his father's wish, and the younger man's long experience on the Sun qualifies him for the new responsibility. Chester S. Lord will remain managing editor and there will be few changes in important places.

They have a very awkward man in Tennessee. He shot a dog lately. In explaining the accident to the owner he shot him. In showing the coroner how the accident occurred, he shot that officer. The other day they liberated him for fear he would try and explain it to somebody else.

Unusual sympathy has been awakened by the case of Charles Rouss, the millionaire merchant of New York, who has offered practically all of his fortune to anybody who will restore to him his failing eyesight. He is now receiving treatment from Dr. Norman, a physician from India, who asserts with much confidence that he can effect the desired cure.

Luertger is heavily handicapped by his face. He would stand a better chance on his next trial if he could leave it off; for, judging by the many pictures seen, it does not look like the face of an innocent man. There may be men on the next jury like the one who, when called to act, was told to take a good look at the prisoner. He looked long and hard, and then turned to the judge, and said: "Judge, I think he's guilty."

Admirers of the new woman will have some of their hopes and ideals shattered by the information that three prominent women of Fort Scott, Kan., who heroically consented to serve on a jury during a four weeks' term of the state court promptly deserted their posts when informed that they might not receive pay for their attendance.

the almighty dollar is conspicuous by its absence.

An exchange tells the following: A lady died, and while the pall-bearers were conveying her to her last resting place, by some mishap, they stumbled and dropped the corpse. The concussion brought the deceased back to life and she lived six or seven years and died again. On the way to the grave they passed over the same ground, and when the pall-bearers reached the identical spot where the stumble had been made at the previous sad services, the grief stricken husband stopped in front of those bearing the remains of his lamented wife and said, "Steady, boys, steady."

This is the way a justice of the peace in Yamhill County married a couple from the backwoods: "By the authority vested in me as an officer of the state of Oregon, by the virgin forests that spread about us in noble grandeur; by the howl of the fox hound and coon dog, and by the morning glory whose clinging tendrils will shade your humble dwelling place; by the hair of the great black bear and the claws of the panther; by the quills of the hedgehog; by the juice of the blackberries whose sweetness fills your heart with joy; by the heavens and the earth and the things under the earth, in the presence of these witnesses, I pronounce you man and wife."
