Slay. Though women have been hunting in the state each fall with good success for the last ten years, women have not before this ventured in unless with male escort. These women who are stepping up beyond the Depsiconneag "dead water" are some very self-reliant women from Massachusetts. They work in some of the stores in a populouseity, and, being spinsters, decided to paddle their own canoe this season. One or two reliable guides accompanied them, and, according to all reports, they are doing extremely well. One of then vouchsafed the information to a passing sportsman that they were doing "a blessed sight better than if they had half a dozen men tagging them around to see that they didn't wet their feet or blow their heads off with their rifles.

remarks old Jed Hawkes, "there won't be any spruce gum left in that neighborhood. Lord, how those women are yanking. They say they have chewed a great deal of gum in their lives, but that they never knew what the clear quill was till they came down here into the state of Maine. While they're about it they are going to take back all they can dig, buy or beg to the city. Even the tall trees can't hide their big lumps away from these women. Three of them wear bloomers and have lots of muscle and they kin climb anything that comes along, from trees to catamounts. Those women are

It is said that half the parties that went into the Moosehead region last fall had women as members,

You see, the women have for so many years heard their male friends tell of the ecstatic delights of hunting in the big Maine woods that their feminine curiosity has been excited and there has been a veritable clamor to be allowed to go in. Once in awhile there is one woman who finds the trip enough to last her for a lifetime. The fun isn't at all as she has expected it would be The woods may be good enough for the men, but as for her, she prefers the bonlevard and the shopping district.

Then there are other women who meet the most feroclous weather the Maine woods have to furnish; who are drenched every other day to the skin and who get dumped out of a canoe two riety.

These women go home and tell all the folks that they have had just the most lovely time and that they are all impatience for the year to roll around, so that they may go again. These are the kind of heroines that can extract fun from every mishap. They are the only kind that should tackle the dubious pleasures of the Maine woods. For that class and it is an extensive one-tha enjoys roughing it, there is no enjoyment in all the world like the autum forest. But the person who goes in for the first time without proper concep-tion of the nature of the fun will be su premely miserable himself, or herself and will make all the folks around more miserable still.

The women haven't commenced to go into the Aroostook and the Pamadum-cook wilderness yet to any great extent. Last year several parties went in from Stacyville to the vicinage of old Katahdin and remained several weeks until the snow came. The women were of the right sort to stand all the adversities, though they were from the city and said that they had the best time of guides, saw a moose standing near the water's edge. The animal was side on and presented a splendid mark. Up went the little rifle, and though the hand of the maiden trembled convulsively good fate sped the ball true and the moose fell dead with a bullet through his heart.

That night the uncle figured up that he had spent over $1,000 in chasing after a moose through the Maine forest-and still lacked the moose. Here was his 19-year-old niece down for the week, and lo! she almost had a moose brought to The uncle disgustedly decided that hunting was about all luck, any-

There is one thing to say about the women who have been coming to Maine woods for the last ten years. Not one has yet shot one of the guides for a bear or her husband for a deer. The woods-men say that when the women are out hunting they are very cautious, with all a woman's inherent fear that some-thing will happen, and that no matter how unskilled the woman may be in the use of firearms they, the guides, are never apprehensive of accidents. It is the impetuous veteran who blows off his own or some one else's head.—Lew-iston (Me.) Journal.

Some Funny Things Are Found in the For Sale or Exchange" Column.

There is more than one way of getting rid of some article you don't wan-and getting hold of something you ready need, or think you need, which is the same thing. If a man owns a dog and hankers for a watch, he doesn't that money in purchasing the time-piece. That was the way it was done years ago, but the "For Sale or Ex-change" column in the Sunday newspapers have changed the method of operation. Pianos are exchanged for sealskins and jewelry. Books are taken in trade for silverware for the table and harnesses. Sign painting goes for clothes, and stenography for bicycles. One young woman adver-tises: "First-class teacher, with best of references, will give stage or society dancing lessons for dry goods, shoes or anything useful." Another person "Opals or amethysts for silver ware, typewriter or hardware." laundress who wants to learn to play the piano says: "Wanted-Piano les sons in exchange for laundry work, or what have you?"

Apparently many of these traders are willing to take nearly anything of value, and, of course, each one expects to get the best of the bargain. There must often be heart-burnings and many sad words when the man who has traded an Angora eat for dental work sinds that his teeth have been filled with plumbers' solder, or the woman who has exchanged a Persian rug for an alarm clock discovers that the time piece runs only on Thursday after-noons, and then strikes nothing but 53.

One enterprising individual advertises: "Best French conversation in exchange for cash or solid goods.' be said that there are many persons who would also like to trade large bunches of "best English conversation for cheese sandwiches or an old pair

A family with lots of board, but a A family with lots of board, but a houseful of leaky pipes, wants to "ex-chauge good board for plumbing; walking distance," and a man with a large wardrobe but nothing to hunt with wants "up-to-date gun for winter suit, No. 42." A hotel man will "give suit, No. 42." A hotel man will "give interest in the business for use of furniture for 15 rooms," while a man or the South side would like to exchange dentiary for housework.

One adventisement which is slightly ambiguous reads: "Wanted-Lady for light housekealing in exchange for good home," and a "competent stenor rapher" desires to exchange her serv ices for board and room, while still a third says: "Pookkeeper's desk, show case and gun for tailoring or any old thing."-Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE ALASKAN VESUVIUS.

The Glare from the Spouting Law Turns Night Into Day-Not Yet Named

Further infomation of the active volcano discovered in the Atlin gold dis-trict in British Columbia is to the effect that the volcano furnishes the miners a light by which to work their claims during the long darkness of the Arctic winter. The glare from the spouting lava, reflected back against the sky, gives an almost continuous twilight to the upper end of the Atlin district.

All the passengers of the steamer Cottage City, arriving from Alaska, have stories to tell of the volcano, but from Dr. W. B. Kinsloe and T. H. James, mining men of Denver, who have been making an examination of the Atlin country, comes the best and apparently most authentic description of the Alaskan Vesuvius.

"The mountain in eruption," said Dr. Kinsloe, "is the second in a range of four towering peaks lying about 50 miles due south of Lake Gladies and a slightly shorter distance from Atlin City. These mountains are of at least 14,000 feet altitude, the crater resting slightly below its three brother peaks.

"It was in the early part of October that the smoke was first seen issuing from the mountain. With the thought of a volcano furthest from their minds. the miners attributed these first signs of an eruption to clouds hanging about the peak. So constant, however, was daily observation from Atlin City.

Then, on November 8, the mountain burst forth in flames. Through the Bad Lands, where he came every year, smoke cloud there shot a stream of when his affairs in the field of b

A BUSINESS OPENING.

Some Ambitious Young Man Should Start a Crematory for Dogs.

Present No Satisfactory Means of Supplying - Women Want Pets Cremated.

Women fare a want which there is at present no satisfactory means of supplying. That is unusual. There are a muny things in the world that there is no earthly reason for wanting, and for which the want has to be created, that to find a real need of something that is not, and yet might be, is phe nomenal. This present need is a crem atory for pets, a place where their re mains can be decently reduced to ashes which can remain a perpetual reminder to loving friends.

There is a surprisingly large number of people, prominent people whom all the world knows, who believe in cremation for human beings, and there are a good many, not so prominent, per-haps, who believe in cremation for their pets if for no one else; but no place has ever been arranged where this could be ratisfactorily done.

Perhaps the only dog who ever had the honor to be cremated in a regular erematory was a much-loved pug by the name of Pompey; this was in Eng land. Pompey was one of the many faithful four-footed friends and belonged to an English elergyman. One day, obeying the common law which human and canine must follow he departed this life, much to the sor-row and regret of his master.

"For cremation we ought all to be devoutly thankful," solloquized the reverend gentleman with whom Pom-pey had lived so long, philosophically. "The sentiment as well as the sanity of cremation is much finer than that of burial. Think of it. No more terrible months with the wind and snow and rain above and the lonely dark prison house of unimaginably loathsome decay beneath-nothing but fair golden fire for an hour and delicate white ashes, at once a symbol of eathly life and heavenly purity."

These sentiments did not apply particularly to Pompey, but as Pompey had died about the time his master was planning a visit to Woking cemetery, ne decided to take the remains of Pom pey along.

"I know he would not have objected to being cremated," said Pompey's maser-"he was so much more sensible would have scorned to be buried like a common dog."

So, after a question of the man in charge. Pompey, in the box in which he had traveled, was placed on a raised sliding railway, at the entrance to the closed furnace door. At a sign the door opened and the box slid quickly into a chamber which was at write heat, the door was quickly closed again, and in about 40 minutes all that was left of poor Pompey was a coffee cupful of ashes. What became of them the master does not tell, but it is implied that they did not go into one of the picturesque urns which are reserved for human ashes.

Not to anyone's knowledeg has a dog ever been regularly cremated in Amer-ica. Letters are received by the people at the head of the crematory companies every once in awhile, and also telegrams and even personal visits from owners of much loved animals, who would like to have them cremated, but their requests are never granted.

"I will not listen to it," says one of the head men of a crematory company. "The place for a human body is not the place for dogs, and I will not allow them to be brought there, though l am fond of dogs myself."

There are not many people who have asked for this privilege-perhaps not more on an average than one or two persons a year—but if a regular crematory for pets should be started, there is no doubt that it would be well patternized and in some families, there ronized, and in some families there would be no end of little urns contain ing the ashes of faithful Pompeys and Fidos and Trays, and even of Tabbys cat show makes it evident that America needs a pet crematory.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BAREFOOT CHILDREN.

It Has Been Decreed That Feet Unshod Means Health and Strongth.

It was no unusual thing the past summer to meet the "barefoot boy" at very turn among the smart set. Mas-Milionaire had discarded shoes and stockings for the hot weather and trudged through country grass and over senshore and in the full blissful-ness of barefootedness, anys the Philadelphia Press.

This was an encroachment on the custom which has prevailed in the south for many years. There the children of the best families run unshed all through the summer. Far from making their feet large and unshapely, as some have supposed, this freedom from footwear allows a natural devel opment and prevents troubles of the feet. One tall and graceful southern woman, who never knew a summer in shoes until she was half grown, wears now a double A, a size which anyone might envy, for few feet are narrow enoug to carry it.

The healthfulness of this new fad is undoubtable. The principles of air baths are contained in it: all the foundations of physical culture are its footholds. A radical physician has lately declared that infants ought not to be burdened with any clothing at all for a time, so that their little bodies could absorb all the oxygen possible. The barefooted child in summer is a grown-up edition of his scheme.

The novelty of it attracts children at once, the freedom of it holds them and its healthfulness recommends it as a delightfu' experiment.

DEHORNED COWS.

Is a Story About One Old Woman Who Wanted Her Cow to Be De-Tailed Also.

Dehorning cows has been all the fashon lately, says an exchange. It's astonshing how many claim that their cow had the hollow horn, simply as a salve for what appears to be a hard-hearted practice. In most instances the deed was done before the parties had even earned that their cattle even h hollow horn. Hence, this not being the motive for the deed, they should not mix it into a salve to soothe their wounded consciences.

A good old sister said: "No, I'll not have my cow dehorned. The Lord made her with horns and He knew better than I do what she needed." A good old brother said when he was asked the cause of hollow horn: "Why, poor feeding and too much milking will keep both the cow and her horns hollow. I recken that's the cause of so much hollow horn."

Another sister worried over the dehorning of her cow. Before it recov ered from the effects of it some one said: "That cow has the hollow tail." The old woman looked around, threw her out and de-tail her at once. Let's make a good job of it while we're at it."

Identified by a Thumbmark.

A remarkable instance of the "thumb mark" method of identifying a criminal is recorded in Bengal. A prisoner had committed a murder which seemed to leave no clew behind it whatever, in turning over the papers of his victim, he had by chance smudged an atlas with his thumb. In Bengal they preserve an impression of the thumb of everyone who has been convicted of a orime and the atlas was sent off for the inspection of experts.

A DESERTED CITY.

Tale of the Dissolution of One of the Strangest Towns on This Continent.

In Nevada county, Cal., repose the remains of one of the strangest towns on this continent. Meadow Lake is the American Pompeii, whose entombing lava is the sum nit snow storms, which sometimes bury it 25 feet deep on a level, and whose annual exhuming is brought about by the summer sun, says the New York Hevald.

It was in the summer of 1865 that the name Meadow Lake was formally given to the town, previously called Excel-sior and Summit City. Until 1858 noth-ing had been done in the way of pros-pecting that particular locality.

Henry Hartly, an Englishman, who visited the vicinity in June, 1863, in search of game and chanced to discover fragments of gold, imparted his discovery to his friends. A company was formed and soon after other companies and the building of a city was started.
With the close of the fall of 1865

the new city contained about 150 houses completed and a number of othcourse of construction. Then all hopes were blasted. The adventurers awoke to the sad reality that, though there was plenty of gold in Meadow Lake, it was so combined with some substance unknown to the metallur-gists that it was effectually locked.

All dreams, the black art, science and metallurgy were set at naught. One after another, as they abandoned hope, the disappointed gold seekers turned their backs on Meadow Lake and went down the mountain.

More than $2,000,000 had been poured into that bottomiess abyss of California known as "dead work," to pay for mills, roads, buildings and mining.

For years the solitary inhabitant of Meadow Lake was Hartly, the Englishman who was mainly responsible for the existence of the town.

H. C. Barnett, who lives near Media, H. C. Barnett, who lives near Media, has in his possession the body of a chicken hawk that was killed in a peculiar manner, reports the Philadelphia Record. Barnett is a general farmer, but makes a specialty of poultry raising. Since he has owned the farm three old cats left by the former tenant have bung about the place in a semi-wild state. At first Barnett tried to tame the animals, but they repulsed all friendly overtures and took up their abode in the barn. However, as they did not harm the chickens they were not molested.

The other day, while Barnett was on his barn roof replacing some shingles, he heard a loud cackling in the yard below. Looking down, he saw a number of his chickens huddled together and seemingly greatly agitated. Then he discovered a large hawk just pre-Then paring to make a swoop. Barnett was preparing to descend to the rescue when the hawk made a plunge at the terrified fowls. The robber was lei-surely preparing to carry off a chicken when there was a quick patter of feet and the three cats bounded into view. The hawk made an effort to escape with its prey, but the cats came to the rescue in the nick of time. The hawk made a spunky resistance, but the combined assault of the cats overpowered him, although only after a flerce bat-Barnett had reached the battlefield by this time, and he rescued the hawk's body from the cats.
