J. S. Smith returned last Friday from the Soldiers' Home at Los Angeles, Calif. He is decidedly glad to be back again in Southern Oregon and will hereafter make his home at Phoenix. Says he got tired of hearing so much of California and nothing of Oregon.

The confession of Mrs. Carlile to the crime of arson was somewhat of a surprise to Medford people. While in the minds of some there was very little doubt as to who burned the building the surprise was that she should confess. In the confession, as related to THE MAIL, she told of having fired the wheat stack first and then went down to the barn and arranged a slow process of ignition and then returned to another grain stack with the intention of igniting it, but by a miscalculation or a poor arrangement of the means of starting the fire at the barn, the fire here started sooner than she expected and she did not have time to fire the other stack before the flames at the barn had been discovered and she was compelled to flee from the scene. The arrangement with which the fire at the barn was started she described as being a tin can in the bottom of which was coal oil. A lighted candle was then placed in the can, which when it had burned to the coal oil, a great conflagration would result and the perpetrator would by that time be well out of harm's way. The candle must have fallen over, thus igniting the oil almost immediately after the instrument of destruction had been placed in position. Mrs. Carlile said she did not know that there were horses in the barn or she would not have set the fire. She gave as her reason for burning the barn that her brother, who owned the property, had occasioned her trouble and she took this means of evening up the score. There was no evidence introduced to implicate Mr. Carlile and the case was dismissed against him. Mrs. Carlile was sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary by Judge Hanna and she was taken to that place Sunday night.

County School Notes.

By Supt. G. A. Gregory.

Several schools are waiting until after the institute to begin work. Maud Merritt, of Grants Pass, and Lulu Newton, of Gold Hill, have been employed to teach the Woodville school. A peep into the school house on Griffin creek found a room full of busy pupils, with F. W. Talcott master of the situation.

Jessie Ross, of Ashland, will take charge of the school in Pleasant creek district. Pupils and parents will be pleased with her.

Miss Elva Galaway was invited to take charge of one of the departments in the Roseburg schools. The Roseburg people are to be congratulated on securing her.

Nute Jacobs is always ready for visitors in his room at Jacksonville. He is never off duty and his pupils are self possessed, showing that they have good training every day.

Nora Sydow will teach the Independence school the coming year and we anticipate excellent results. The teacher has a good school and the school a good teacher in this case.

When you get tired of the rush and whirl of business life, step into Miss Ewan's room in the north school at Ashland. Her method of teaching the little ones is so quiet and pleasant that it rests one to stay there an hour.

Miss Ewan takes time to build a new school but when ready goes to it with a vim. Sept. 19th there is no sign of a building there. Sixty days from now there will be a neat two-room building completed, furnished in elegant style by Mr. Gillette, of Ashland, and a crowd of smart children faving a smiling teacher—Miss Anna Jeffrey.

A visit to the Ashland normal found teachers and pupils busy as bees. Each department is in charge of a teacher who knows what to do and how to do it. The rooms for young men are so crowded that it seems necessary to build a new dormitory. Refitting the building has made a great difference in the appearance inside and out and the facilities for doing first class work are much better than ever before.

The school in No. 71 closed last Thursday, having been in session all summer. It is called by the patrons the most successful term ever held in the district. A basket dinner was enjoyed by the many friends of the school in the shade of a fine grove which surrounds the school house, after which a program was rendered by the pupils which did credit to their teacher and themselves. The whole district is better because Nora Sydow has spent three months there.

Death of Mrs. Root. Mrs. Sarah M Root, one of the oldest of Medford's residents, died September 18th. She had been failing in health for some time and death came as a welcome release. In her old age she became very helpless and was tenderly cared for by friends.

Mrs. Root was about eighty-three years old at the time of her death. She was a native of Maryland but most of her life was spent in Iowa and Oregon. The cyclone of 1880, in Iowa, swept away her home, and other reverses which accompanied the Civil war shattered her former comfortable fortune, and she came to Oregon with her son in 1873 to start anew in life. She was an accomplished musician and taught music during a long term of years. A strong religious character was hers and also one of firm convictions of duty. Converted at the early age of fourteen years, her whole life was one of consistent christian living and activity in the membership of the Baptist Church, where her musical ability was very helpful in the years she served as organist. Her funeral was largely attended on Sunday afternoon from the Baptist Church, where Rev. E. Russ conducted the services, and the interment was in the Odd Fellows cemetery. Mrs. Root leaves one son and a large circle of friends to mourn her departure.
