-Behool Superintendent G. A. Greg-ory, of Jackson County, was one of the principal entertainers at the State Teachers' Association which met at salem hast wook. Mr. Gregory read a paper before the association on "School Libraries—How to Got; How to Use." The paper was well received and was complimented upon very highly by the best educators in the state. Bo appro-priate and pleasing was the paper that publishers of educational papers re-quested the article for publication in their journals. Through the efforts of Mr. Gregory, since he has been super-intendent of our county schools, twenty inferent school districts in the county. The Oregonian quotes Mr. Gregory as saying that he "Considered the course of study of paramount importance to the text-book. Creating the power to of study of paramount importance the text-bool. Creating the power the text-book. Creating the power to reason well was better than committing to memory the facts contained in text-books, and to this end the teacher should be strong enough to do more oral work."

Mr. Stewart filed a homestead right on eighty acres of government land in Missouri in 1869, but under an act of congress all soldiers of the Union army who filed upon a lesser amount of land than 160 acres prior to June 22, 1874, are entitled to sell their right to this lesser amount, and it is this right which Mr. Stewart has disposed of. This item may be of interest to other soldiers who are situated similarly to Mr. Stewart. If there are any such they should see to it that their claims are established. Should they prefer to lo-cate upon this additional land them-solves they can do so, and make proof upon same without the usually required residence. realdence.

-W. H. Meeker & Co, have moved their stock of dry goods, clothing and gents' furnishings to their new store room, in the J. H. Stewart block. The room is 25x85 feet in size and is by sev-eral notches the best sales room in the oity. The shelving and counters are weeks Bros.' best effort in that line. They are finished in natural wood-sugar pine, and this in hard oil. The carving and architectural designing are exquisite. The shelving is twenty-three inches deep, giving ample depth for any line of goods which is desired to put on them. The front of the store is supplied with an abundance of light --which shines through large plate glass. A skylight affords light about midway of the room, while the rear is lighted by windows in that section. The entrance to the store is laid in enameled mosaics of very pretty pat-tern. The entrance, or reces, is un-usually deep, affording ample room for splendid show window displays. ### Nashville Students in Medford.

It is necessary to say but little re-garding these celebrated colored vocal-ists; they have attained an almost world wide reputation. After years of study these students started out to reproduce the quaint, mirthful and melodious songs of the negro and to show the darkey's characteristics without cari-cature, but in a manner truly instruc-tive and amusing to all. Their success has been phenominal: they have enter-tained people in nearly every city and town of this country and Canada, and for years the mere announcement that the Nashville Students are coming is

Death of Miss Hattle Sisemore.

Death of Miss Hattle Sisemore. Miss Hattle Sisemore died at Pasa-dena, Calif., on Thursday of last week, December 28th, of consumption. The remalus were brought to Jackson County Sunday evening and interment was made in the Sams Valley cemetary on Monday, funeral services being held at the family home in that vicinity. Miss Sisemore had been ill for several monthe and last April she left Jackson County for Tuscon, Arizona, where it was expected she would get relief, but none came and she went to California, and instead of improving her health she grew worse until death claimed her. A few weeks before her death her mother, Mrs. John Sisemore, and brother, John Pelton, and her young friend, Miss Frankle Barnes, were summoned to her bedside and remained with her while life lasted and all accommanied her re-
