W. J. FURNISH.....Umatilla County
O. F. PAXTON.....Multnomah County

BRYAN has quit quoting Jefferson and Jackson, has about given up Lincoln and Grant, and has taken to Scripture to defend his position as the Republic savior.

ALL of the counties in Arkansas have not been heard from, but at the hour of going to press Chairman Jones, chairman of the Populist Committee, had not parted with any of his American Cotton Bale Trust stock.

THE withdrawal of $25,000,000 gold as a loan to Great Britain had not the slightest effect last week. In 1895 it would have precipitated a panic. The difference represents the faith of the people in republican supremacy in the coming presidential election.

In 1896 Colonel Watterson described Mr. Bryan as "a dishonest dodger, a daring adventurer and a political fakir." Furthermore, he expressed his disgust by going to Paris and remaining until after the election. So it will be perceived what an unpleasant dose the colonel is trying to swallow this year.

GENERAL BRAGG, the famous leader of the Iron Brigade, and one of the Democratic wheel horses of the northwest, is solid for McKinley and below is his reason as given the Chicago Inter-Ocean:

"I am with McKinley solely in consequence of the sound-money issue. That of itself is enough to gain him the support of every honest man in the country. The Democratic party is in a state of decomposition, but I have seen very pretty posies grow out of repulsive fertilizers. For the present campaign, however, I am with McKinley."

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER is reputed to be the richest man in America, yet he is said to be starving to death. His stomach refuses to digest anything, and this multi-millionaire is obliged to live on a little stale bread, skimmed milk and barley water. How much would he give for a healthy, sound, poor man's ability to eat and digest the food he craves? If a celebrated question of Jesus may be paraphrased to suit the case of Rockefeller, it might be asked: What shall it profit a man to gain one hundred million dollars and starve to death?—Portland Telegram.

Says the Portland Telegram: "The hopgrowers of Oregon are feeling unusually well this year, as the price is better than it has been for several years past, and sufficient to enable the owners of well-tended yards to make a profit on their crops. Men who are fortunate enough to raise a crop of prunes this year, as quite a good many did, after all the reports of an entire failure of the crop, are also going to make some money this fall, as the price is looking up satisfactorily. Taken all in all, Oregon is a productive and prosperous state."

THE San Francisco Examiner said, over Mr. Hearst's signature, November 10, 1898: "The vote of this election is a vote of approval for the war and the principle of expansion. It is both right and reasonable that the administration which, despite some mistakes, carried this glorious war to a successful conclusion should receive a vote of confidence. It is both right and reasonable that the policy of expansion, ever the policy of the American people since Jefferson annexed the Louisianas, should receive the approval of the American voters, Republican and Democratic."

THE FULL DINNER PAIL.

THE Baltimore Sun scoffs at the Republican campaign cry. "Four years more of full dinner pail." It pretends to look upon this as an appeal to the stomach instead of the reason of the workingmen.

The Sun's reasoning, says the Oakland Tribune, is shallow. The full dinner pail is an allegorical representation of peace, plenty and industry. It symbolizes the prosperity of a nation and the contentment of its citizens. It is the reverse of unrest, discontent and distress. Napoleon said: "Armies travel on their bellies." So does civilization. The empty dinner pail wrecks governments and overthrows dynasties. It is a danger signal in all lands. It denotes the absence of prosperity and content. It is the sign manual of idleness and poverty. It means the degradation of manhood, a wasting of the vital forces of a nation. While individuals are starving the nation is suffering from an industrial paralysis.

No dinner in the workingman's pail means no money in Government's treasury. The man who has no money to buy food cannot pay taxes. National weakness comes from lowering the standard of living, and productive forces lessen with a shortening of the food supply. It was the empty dinner pail that precipitated the French revolution and plunged Europe into a war that lasted twenty years.

"Four years more of the full dinner pail" is an appeal to the best reason and the highest patriotism. It is an exhortation not to plunge a prosperous and happy people into the throes of poverty and degradation. It sets hum of the factory above the yelp of the demagogue. It typifies the fact that the best patriot is the man who has plenty of work and plenty to eat, and is a homely illustration of the truth that a nation is strong in proportion to the standard of living prevailing among its people. The full dinner pail means business. It means order, home comforts, money in the bank and a dollar to spend on the babies occasionally. There are good clothes, a contribution for the church and a subscription to the paper in it. There is wealth, power and progress under the lid. The workingman's stomach is the barometer of a nation's greatness.

Married--Robertson-Rowe.

There was a quiet wedding at the home of G. R. P. Rowe, in Sams Valley last Sunday at noon, at which time Mr. George Robertson and Miss Elva Blanche Rowe, both of Sams Valley, were united in marriage by Rev. Adolph Haberly, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Medford. George Grizzle, of Medford, was groomsmen and Miss May Rowe, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. Only the families of the bride and groom and a few intimate friends were in attendance. After the wedding an elaborate dinner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson will spend their honeymoon visiting Crater lake, Pell can bay and other points of interest, after which they will take up their residence in Sams Valley.

—Contractor E. W. Starr administered unto one of his eyes a dose of horse liniment last Friday, and as a result he is temporarily blinded therein. It was a mistake—and a painful one—but not serious.

Tonight

Just before retiring, if your liver is sluggish, out of tune and you feel dull, bilious, constipated, take a dose of

Hood's Pills

And you'll be all right in the morning.

MINING TIMBERS.

The Mountain Copper Company, Limited, of Keswick, Shasta County, California, is open to receive bids for the supply of 90,000 feet of Red Pine Mining Timbers of the following dimensions: Deliveries to commence the beginning of October:

Not less than 14, 16, 18 and 20 feet long, and not less than 14 inches diameter at the smaller end for logs, or 12 inches square for sawn timbers.

Going to Have a Poultry Show.

The Southern Oregon Poultry Association at its meeting last Saturday was well represented by the members, who transacted a large amount of business. The chief feature of the meeting was the fixing of a date to hold a show, which among other things was accomplished with promptness.

President Weber called the meeting to order and briefly outlined the things to be considered. After an article was read, endorsing a poultry show, signed by most of the business men of Medford, the members got down to business and decided to open the show in Medford the 19th day of November, 1900, which will last one week. This exhibition will include all classes of poultry, Belgian hares, fruit and flowers. In fact, it will be more of an indoor fair than a show, and it is hoped by the association that the people of this valley will not regard it as strictly a show for Medford alone, but a display of products of, and for the people of Jackson County.

This association was organized purely and simply to encourage and promote the different needed industries of the valley, and it is hoped that all persons who think they have good poultry, fruit or flowers will enter this show with their stock or produce and in this way find out who has the best. All the business men of Medford who have been interviewed offer their hearty co-operation to make the show a success. The various committees have been appointed and will busy themselves between now and November 19th in making necessary arrangements. Parties sending fowls or hares from a distance may rest assured that they will be cared for in the proper manner. From time to time THE MAIL will print other features of the show as developments go on and as committees report.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The schools will open Monday, Sept. 10th, with Grace Foster, north primary; Emma Reed, south primary; May Phipps, 2d grade; Lizzie Ferguson, 3d; Fannie Haskins, 4th; Grace Amann, 5th; Elsie Wiley, 6th; Julia Fielder, 7th; Gertrude Sutton, 8th and 9th; N. L. Narreagan, 10th and 11th and principal. After seating, enrollment and assignment of work, on Monday, the schools will be dismissed that all may see and enjoy the circus parade.

The coming year promises to be one of the most pleasant and profitable in the history of our schools. Patrons, teachers and pupils have everything to gain in standing by the teachers and school officers, as the fair fame of our school is the most potent incentive to induce strangers to make their homes with us.

A teacher's class will be formed for the benefit of the regular course student and others who wish to prepare for teaching or the county examinations.

Our Business Course—bookkeeping, commercial law, commercial arithmetic and penmanship, offers many advantages to those who wish to fit themselves for practical life.

Mayaie Foster, '95, will teach the primary department of the Seaside schools this year. Her work in music will be missed by pupils and teachers.

Many of the 1900 boys and girls are coming back for special work.

Bessie Conde, 1900, will soon leave for San Francisco.

WOMEN AND DRESS.

A Few Rambling Observations by a Man Who Thinks He Knows Something About It.

Authorities say there are more women than men in the world. Also, there are more varieties. Every woman is a different variety—in fact, but two are chief, those who know how to dress and those who don't.

A gentleman is defined as one who is superior to his clothes, but the lady is known by them. Lady, therefore, is the first of the above-named two varieties.

Now it does not follow that a lady is one who is given to wearing gay gowns and giddy garments. Fine feathers may make fine birds, but a crow would look awkward with a peacock's tail.

The demure little lady with the pale complexion and dark limpid eyes and such a general air of sugar and simplicity knows that a plain gown of black or gray is just the thing she needs to complete the picture. Her frock will be plain to plainfulness—on another girl—but she knows what suits her. If she can only get one of those chuck-me-under-the-chin bonnets and look up inquiringly from beneath its brim she knows the picture is perfect.

By the way, what does she inquire when she gives this glance? It may be, as Mr. Gilbert said, that she is wondering what on earth this world can be, but the chances are that she is silently and innocently inquiring if she isn't the sweetest thing in sight.

There are women who should always wear light and feathery, airy-fairy, puffy creations in costumes. These are usually the tall or medium-sized, willowy, blond type. Frills and furbelows are to them what fleecy clouds are to a summer sky.

As for the tailor-made girl, she is all right in the daylight, but not after dark.

Women are never vain. The one who stands half an hour before a mirror is merely looking for a chance to improve her appearance. She is never satisfied with herself five minutes at a time, and surely that is not vanity. Women are merely jealous or patronizing or covetous.

There are some women who can tell a dear sister that her dress or bonnet is a dream and then describe it as a freak to another, but that comes from envy. It all depends upon one's point of view. There may be a little deceit in it, but what is more natural than deceit?

By the way, I meant to have said that there are lots of young women who are not demure brunettes, nor yet willowy blonds nor tailor-made girls, who dress well. They always keep the picture in mind. They take liberties with Mme. Fashion, but they always study for the picture, although the use of paint is usually deplored.

Now, that is what catches the average man. He does not go into the details of dress unless he is employed in the woman's department of a store. The average man looks for effects. A big hat may catch his eye, but he generally is critical as to what is beneath it. A flashy waist may stir his attention, but his remarks may not always be commendatory. If the chief aim or woman is to get a husband a knowledge of this is of considerable moment.

The average man thinks a slack-dressed woman will be a slack housekeeper, and he is generally right. The woman who leaves large rents in her gloves is apt to overlook his hose and linen. And there you are.

But then it isn't the clothes that make the woman any more than the man. Now, there's the woman's woman—two kinds of her, in fact, the one they pet and the one they worship. The first is of the confiding sort about whom everyone remarks: "Isn't she just the dearest little thing?" for she has a trick of smuggling her way into the affections of all women that they prefer her company to a man's—sometimes.

The other is the kind that invites confidence. She is usually of the large-minded type of whom all women must stand in awe. They do it as women do almost everything, intuitively. And then there is the "motherly" woman, whom women worship more devotedly.

The average man when he meets these types has his well-defined ideas knocked askew. He is even more vague than ever on the clothes question then. As I said before, he only gets general impressions, but there are times when even his well-planned ideas fail him. Incidentally he has planned them all by the last woman he has met. Of course, they are shattered when he meets the next one. When he begins to think it over he finds, as a general rule, that the maxim stands true: there are only two kinds of women—those who know how to dress and those who don't.—Home Life.

Everyone who has Stock, or keeps a Cow, needs

GALLOWAY'S Waste-Proof Feed Boxes

For feeding stock hay or grain

BECAUSE it is a FOOD SAVER. As the food is all consumed within the box, there is practically NO WASTE. Each box will feed four head of cattle at a time, and costs about ONE CENT for each cubic foot of space contained within it. The boxes are strong, durable, self-supporting and easily moved. The stock runs to them at will. Every box used will SAVE four times its cost in one season; count your cattle and see how much you could save by using these boxes. A section of the box should be in front of every cow when stabled. It is BETTER, CHEAPER, and MORE CONVENIENT to use than any other feeding device.

If there is no agent in your locality, send Two Dollars to the patentee and get a RIGHT to make and use, good for a full time. A cut, with full directions for making, accompanies each right. Requires no skill—anyone can make them.
