Pity and Beauty

The most beautiful thing in the world is the baby, all dimples and joy. The most pitiful thing is that same baby, thin and in pain. And the mother does not know that a little fat makes all the difference. Dimples and joy have gone, and left hollows and fear; the fat, that was comfort and color and curve—all but pity and love—is gone. The little one gets no fat from her food. There is something wrong; it is either her food or food-mill. She has had no fat for weeks; is living on what she had stored in that plump little body of hers; and that is gone. She is starving for fat; it is death, be quick! Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the fat she can take; it will save her.

week in our city at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Newbury, during their absence in Salem. W. R. Stansell, of Footh creek, manager of the Rogue River Mining & Lumber Company, was in Jacksonville the first of the week. Mrs. Wm. Priest, of Fairhaven, Wash., is in Jacksonville, the guest of Mrs. O. Harbaugh and Mrs. Priest's daughter, Miss Edith. G. W. Kincaid, R. E. Peyton and T. D. Conklin, of Peyton, were in Jacksonville Saturday upon business before County Clerk Newbury. Lewis, who died in this city Monday, January 28th, was conducted on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. O. J. Gist, of Medford, officiating. The music was rendered by Mrs. J. W. Robinson, Mrs. Gus Newbury, Miss Corinne Linn and Messrs. Henry Dox and John F. Miller. A large concourse of friends and neighbors followed the remains to the cemetery where they were gently laid to rest. Mrs. Lewis leaves a husband, two daughters and four sons, who have the sympathy of many warm friends in their affliction. Most enjoyable services were held in the Presbyterian Church last Sunday, both morning and evening, Rev. Knotts, Presbyterian missionary, preaching two excellent sermons. Rev. Hansen kindly dismissed his congregation in the evening that they might attend the services. The congregational singing, which was unusually fine, was led by Mrs. Fletcher Linn, of Portland, and Miss Carrie Beekman, accompanied by Mrs. Susie Neil at the organ. During the morning service Mrs. Linn sang a solo, "The Holy City," accompanied by Miss Beekman at the organ, and in the evening the ladies rendered Granier's "Hosanna." Mrs. Linn possesses a voice of unrivaled sweetness and much power, which through careful training enables her to sing with much ease and splendid effect. Miss Beekman is also a fine musician, and her accompaniment, together with Mrs. Linn's voice, made the selections given a treat not often enjoyed by the people of Jacksonville.

We are called upon this week to chronicle the death of James Alexander Edington, which occurred on Monday, January 28th. He was employed at the Voorhis orchard, near Medford, and came to spend Sunday with his parents, intending to return to Medford on the passenger train due here at 11 o'clock p. m. While waiting at the depot a freight train came in and he concluded to go on it, but in attempting to get on he lost his grip and fell, the train passing over him, crushing his right leg and inflicting other injuries. A physician was summoned and the limb was amputated, after which the patient rallied somewhat, but death came to his relief Monday afternoon at three o'clock. James was a young man whom everyone liked and this sad accident has cast a gloom over the entire community. Only sorrow and regret are felt that the pride of the family, a favorite in the community and one in whom all who knew him fondly believed to have been united the highest qualities of mind and heart should meet death so unexpectedly. Deceased was twenty-one years of age and had lived here for the past ten years. He leaves a loving father and mother, two brothers, two sisters and a grandmother at home, besides many other relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. He was an honored member of Table Rock Lodge, A. O. U. W., which order conducted the burial services. Rev. O. J. Gist, of Medford, preached the funeral sermon. Members of the A. O. U. W. lodges of all the neighboring towns were in attendance at the funeral.

Robbed the Grave. A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters', and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c., guaranteed at Chas. Strang's drug store.

Dr. Nanson has settled down as a Norwegian squire and sportsman, and is now a member of the great land owning class. His possessions, which cost a considerable sum, lie on the borders of Telemarken, to the south of Lynkopi, one of the highest summits of that district. He has become owner of a large hotel which was built some years ago for summer tourists, but will now serve as his private residence. He has also acquired a number of surrounding farms and fields.

THE DISSOLUTE BUG.

Beetle That Has the Cigarette Habit in Worst Form.

Bored Holes in Paper Covers and Thrives on the Contents—Whole Stocks in Stores and Factories Destroyed.

There's a new bug in town, and it has the cigarette habit—in fact, it's called the "cigarette" beetle, because of its fondness for the paper cigars. While cigarettes are its favorite "dope," this bug does not hesitate to lurch on the dried tobacco leaf, and as a consequence much consternation prevails among the growers, manufacturers and dealers of the products of tobacco leaf throughout the country. Great loss is being suffered by the ravages of this bug, principally in manufactured stock.

In making an investigation the experts of the department of agriculture assert that among the many insects injurious to cured tobacco none approach, in economic importance, the species which has become known as the cigarette beetle. The name of this insect is more or less of a misnomer, since the beetle not only feeds on all kinds of dried tobacco, and even snuff, but also on many other substances, such as rhubarb, ginger, cayenne pepper, ergot, tumeric, yeast cakes, rice, figs, prepared fish food and dried plants prepared for the herbarium. In short, its eating habits confirm the assertion that a stomach that can stand cigarettes can hold anything.

Working as it does in all kinds of cured tobacco, and living in this substance during all stages of its existence, this bug damages cigarettes and cigars principally by boring out of them, making round holes in the wrappers, so that they will not "draw." Leaf tobacco is injured for wrapping purposes by being punctured with holes made by both the larvae and the beetles, and fillers and fine cut are depreciated by the reduction of their substance by the actual amount consumed by the larvae. Cigars and cigarettes infected by the bug have a very distinct and disagreeable flavor and odor.

As a protection for the shop keepers against the ravages of this pest the government recommends the fumigation of the stock of the establishment with blausphide of carbon. Where the infection is confined to show cases containing tobacco goods a saucful of the carbon may be placed therein over night, which will be sufficient time to rid them of the beetle.

When the cigarette bug has once gained a foothold in a factory it is a matter of considerable time, expense and energy to get rid of it, and at the same time it is as much as the reputation of the factory is worth to allow goods to go out upon the market containing the insect in any form. Boxes or piles of cigars or cigarettes should be displayed in stores only in tightly closed cases. This precaution is more important during the latter part of April, May and late in August and September than any other time of the year.

This beetle also inhabits drug stores during the summer months, and feeds on many articles on the shelves of the herb and root character. The carbon treatment should be made for its extermination.

MILITIA IN ALASKA. Conditions Not Wholly Bad Notwithstanding Extreme Cold. Some Particulars of a Soldier's Life Given by One Who Has Lived in the Yukon Country. The government having at last expended considerable sums of money toward establishing military posts in Alaska, it is reasonable to suppose that the army must in the future look forward to regular details of service in that part of our country. As service in high latitudes is new to most of us, and as the hardships of Arctic life have been as much exaggerated, says a writer in the Army and Navy Journal, I shall presume to give my fellow-officers the benefit of a year's experience on the Yukon, with the expectation that it may be of use to them.

IN THE GRASP OF AN OCTOPUS. Sailor Is Killed by a Devil Fish While Swimming Near His Ship. Jules De Bar, a sailor on the bark Olympic, was dragged down by a devil fish while taking a swim near his ship. His shipmates saw him dive, and waited for him to come up. As he failed to appear, they became alarmed, and made a search, without result. Twenty-four hours later his body was found, with the face and part of the body eaten away, and bearing plain marks of the tentacles of a devil fish. It is supposed that he dived to the bottom, and was seized by the fish and held down until he drowned. Several cases of this kind are on record. The natives are often seized by devil fish, but they promptly hit the fish on the head, and it releases the grasp of its tentacles.
