Get A Timber Claim Now.

J. H. Messler, formerly of Michigan, now of Roseburg, contributes the following on the value of Oregon timber to the Roseburg Plaindealer:

"Why sit on the fence and see them go by? Get you some timber while you have your choice. The next two months will bring the largest immigration this country has ever experienced and the larger part of the immigrants will be after timber lands. It is only a matter of a few years until, should you want a homestead, all that is, or would be your choice, is just gone. I speak from experience. Only a few years ago in Michigan, I thought any old time would do, and I sat like a bump on a log, it seems to me, and let every one else go by and get a nice bunch of pine timber. But I found thousands just as foolish; they had waited a little too long. Only a few years ago Michigan was the center of the lumbering industry; today they are shipping Oregon pine to far-away Michigan. Take my advice and go out and get all the pine lands you can handle, and in a few years you will have money enough and some to loan. The pine in Oregon is good and it is bound to come out in the near future. I believe a claim of 160 acres, which would lumber 5,000,000 feet, on some river or near some railroad, will bring at least $5,000 in two or three years. I have induced 14 Michigan people to come to Oregon, since I came, and have letters that eight more are coming.

TWELVE MILES LONG.

The Simplon Tunnel Will Be Bored Through That Distance.

Some of the Great Tunnels of This and Other Countries That Have Taken Many Years and Much Money to Excavate.

When the state of Massachusetts many a long year ago took up the task of digging out the Hoosac tunnel, and the work dragged along in the most tedious manner imaginable, the wife of New England, and especially Oliver Wendell Holmes, made countless jests about "that dreadful bore," which it seemed at one time would never be completed. But with an ample margin before the end of the last century it was opened to railroad traffic, and it has been useful ever since. The railroad companies all over the continent have been spending millions upon millions of dollars in the construction of tunnels since the first excavation was thrown open for the Hoosac subway. But several of the most difficult and costly tunnels of the globe have not been finished by private corporations. Governments have decided in a number of instances that public interests made it advisable that huge amounts should be expended out of the public funds for the piercing of mountains and the building of railroads far below the surface of the earth. And now, says the New York Tribune, how the scope and extent of such enterprises have been enlarged and developed!

Before the first blast at the foot of the Hoosac hills was exploded the drilling out of a passageway of not more than a mile in length, under a considerable hill or a peak of moderate height, was regarded as a formidable task. The Hoosac hole was about five miles in length, and so many years were spent before trains were sent through it, and so many millions of dollars were thrown into the pit, that several more-grown sages of the old Bay state were inclined to boast of it as one of the seven wonders of the modern world. But the Hoosac is no mighty affair in comparison with the tunnels under great mountain ranges in our western territory and elsewhere. Under the Alps especially has engineering skill accomplished great things. The Arlberg tunnel is a half dozen miles in length, the Mont Cenis nearly eight, the St. Gothard more than nine, while the Simplon, now under way, is almost twice as long as the Arlberg, a half longer than the Mont Cenis and almost a third longer than the St. Gothard. It is expected that the Simplon will be open for traffic in 1904. The barrier of the Alps as an obstruction to swift and easy travel to and from Italy is almost done away with. What obstacles will discourage the engineers of future generations when those of to-day are so eager to dig out tunnels 12 miles long thousands of feet beneath the summits of snow-capped mountains?

HAS A KINDLY HEART.

King Edward Cares for His Old and Faithful Servants in All Departments.

King Edward VII. of England has a heart as kindly and tender as ever beat in a human breast, says an eastern exchange. Other faults he may have, but he never forgets one who has done him or his family a long and loyal service. One of the most efficient and faithful officers, Capt. E., on a certain royal yacht, is or has been a man of very moderate means. To hold a commission in the British navy is an expensive proposition, which calls for an independent income many times in excess of the actual pay. Especially is this so in the case of the royal craft, on which during the season there is one continuous round of entertainments. The officer in question had a growing family, a home that befitted his social station and little more than his pay. For some years he battled with the situation, but at last, worn out and heart sick, determined to resign and enter the merchant marine. In some way or other the king heard of his resolve. Less than a couple of months ago Capt. E. was surprised and even alarmed to receive a peremptory command from the king ordering him to report at Buckingham palace forthwith.

Although he knew that his skirts were clean he felt perturbed nevertheless. But his reception by his majesty was of a most cordial nature. After some preliminary the king said: "I think you are entitled to a holiday in return for your years of work on the —. So that you better take this." The astounded officer was handed an admiralty order granting him a year's leave of absence on captain's full pay. "You can renew that at the end of the year if you so desire," added Edward VII., with a significant laugh. "And, by the way, this may interest you." Capt. E. was here given a letter offering him command of a superb and newly built liner, one of several running between London and an English colony. The letter was to the effect that the personal recommendation of the king was the cause of its being written. The overwhelmed captain never quite remembered how he got out of the palace. But he is now the monarch of the ocean liner.

SCROFULA

I bequeath to my children Scrofula with all its attendant horrors, humiliation and suffering. This is a strange legacy to leave to posterity; a heavy burden to place upon the shoulders of the young.

This treacherous disease dwells in the body and hinders the growth and development of the faculties, and the child born of blood poison, or scrofula-tainted parentage, is poorly equipped for life's duties.

Scrofula is a disease with numerous and varied symptoms; enlarged glands or tumors about the neck and armpits, catarrh of the head, weak eyes and dreadful skin eruptions upon different parts of the body show the presence of tubercular or scrofulous matter in the blood. This dangerous and stealthy disease entrenches itself securely in the system and attacks the bones and tissues, destroys the red corpuscles of the blood, resulting in white swelling, a pallid, waxy appearance of the skin, loss of strength and a gradual wasting away of the body.

S. S. S. combines both purifying and tonic properties, and is guaranteed entirely vegetable, making it the ideal remedy in all scrofulous affections. It purifies the deteriorated blood, makes it rich and strong and a complete and permanent cure is soon effected. S. S. S. improves the digestion and assimilation of food, restores the lost properties to the blood and quickens the circulation, bringing a healthy color to the skin and vigor to the weak and emaciated body.

The Largest Coins in Circulation.

The largest gold coin now in circulation is the gold ingot, or "loaf," of Anam, a French colony in eastern Africa. It is a flat, round goldpiece, and on it is written in india ink its value, which is about £65. The next sized coin to this valuable but extremely awkward one is the obang of Japan, which is worth £10, and next comes the benda of Ashanti, which represents a value of about £9. The California fifty dollar goldpiece is worth about the same as the benda. The heaviest silver coin in the world also belongs to Anam, where the silver ingot is worth about £3. Then comes the Chinese tael, equal to about 7 shillings, and then the Austrian double thaler.

Dogs and Humor.

Mr. Cecil Aldin, an authority, gives it as his opinion that dogs as a rule are devoid of conscious humor. "The clown dog in a troupe of performing dogs, for instance, is not really funny when he burlesques the performances of other dogs, but he seems to be funny to the spectators. I am afraid that the people who credit dogs with being intentionally funny are deceiving themselves. A dog likes fun—a good romp and game with children—but his sense of humor has not been developed, and it is not subtle." A dog's best sense at humor, Mr. Aldin thinks, is when he is being tickled. "He opens his mouth, then screws his face into what people are pleased to call a laugh."

A Game For Two.

Once upon a time a young gentleman and a younger lady were alone in a bright parlor in front of a cheerful open fire, with a table between them, playing cards. As they continued to play and chat the table was not so much between them, for they both got nearer the fire and played the game on one corner of the table.

They had started in to play euchre, but after an hour and a half they found that they were playing hearts.

Moral—We are not always sure what the game is.

No Right to Live.

Beggar—Won't you give me some money, professor? My money is all gone, and I can't live.

Professor—How old are you?

Beggar—Forty years, sir.

Professor—Forty years! Don't you know that according to the latest mortality tables the average age of the male population of Europe reaches only thirty-four years and five months? Statistically you have no right to live any longer anyway!—Megendorfer Blatter.

Corn.

Corn, with its twenty-four to thirty-two rows under cultivation, was once but a coarse grass, hiding each seed it produced under a husk, as wheat and oats now do. Brought out to the light and sun, with a chance to get at enough plant food, it has worked its way up to eight rows of seeds, covering these with one husk. The farmer and nature together have added the extra sixteen and twenty-four rows.

In a paper from Eutaw, Alabama, we noticed the weather report for the week ending Feb. 24 1922. In that glorious clime "where it never gets cold," we find that the average maximum temperature for the week was 50 1/2 and minimum temperature 35 1/2 degrees, while away up here in Oregon where those people think we are frozen up most of the time we find for the same week, maximum temperature 57 degrees and the minimum temperature 41 5/6. Here our lowest temperature was 36 degrees while there they enjoyed an atmosphere of 29 degrees. For the whole month of Feb. here we find the average maximum temperature 52 degrees, minimum temperature 44 degrees. Comment needless.

Marvelous Sucker Story.

Klamath County is famous for snakes. It has other marvels also, as the following story from the Klamath Falls Express witnesses: "During the spawning season the suckers crowd Lost river at the Gap so thickly that people use them for a bridge in preference to the one built by the county because they say it is solid. The people of the county throw them into wagons with pitchforks without lessening the supply as those further down the stream crowd into the vacant places. Nearly any day this time of the year a stream of double bed wagons can be seen coming from the 'fishery' loaded to the top with suckers.

"To one who has seen a sulky rake driven in and out of the stream and dumped each time on either bank till two windrows of suckers a half mile long was the result, it is not necessary to bring corroborative evidence, but the tenderfoot is very weary, and we do not expect the full credence to which we are entitled."
