

An amendment to the constitution of Oregon, providing for the adoption of the initiative and referendum, was passed at the general state election, and is now a law of Oregon.

The will of the late ex-Governor Sylvester Penney was filed for probate at Portland. The bulk of the estate, valued at $139,000, was left to the widow and a daughter, Mrs. W. H. Russell.

For 15 minutes after the drop was made Louis Penney, murderer of Francis Legere, gurgled and gasped as the rope strangled him, says a Vancouver (B. C.) dispatch. He was condemned to death, and the hanging took place at Kamloops. The official executioner bungled the job, as he has done in hanging other criminals, but Penney's strangling was of the longest duration.

Chief Justice Kent, sitting as a trial judge in the third judicial district, handed down a decision in the suits of Thomas Wilson against Governor Murphy and the former auditor, says a Phoenix (A. T.) dispatch. Every territorial warrant that was complained of was declared by the court to have been properly issued. This ends a matter that has attracted much attention.

Spring Fever.

Spring fever is another name for biliousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels mean a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such symptoms. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleansing the system of impurities. Safe pills. Never gripe. "I have taken DeWitt's Little Early Risers for torpid liver every spring for years," writes R. M. Eversly, Moundsville, W. Va. "They do me more good than anything I have ever tried."—Chas. Strang.

By a decision of Judge Hall at Oakland, Cal., C. W. Denny was held liable for a debt for medical services contracted on behalf of his wife's former husband. The decision was rendered in the suit of Dr. H. G. Thomas against Denny and wife to recover $400 for medical services rendered the latter's late husband, Peter Thompson, who died about a year and a half ago. Judgment was entered for the plaintiff for $571. By marrying Thompson's widow Denny became jointly liable with her, under the ruling of the court, for the physician's claim.

How to Avoid Trouble.

Now is the time to provide yourself and family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over, and if procured now may save you a trip to town in the night or in your busiest season. It is everywhere admitted to be the most successful medicine in use for bowel complaints, both for children and adults. No family can afford to be without it. For sale by Chas. Strang, druggist.

The Diamond Match company of Chicago has bought upward of 50,000 acres of timber lands in Butte and adjoining counties, California. The company will have a practical forester in charge of the tract, and modern methods will be adopted in the care of the property. When the time comes for encroachment upon the virgin forest only those trees over a certain age and size will be cut down, and, as is practiced in Germany and Japan under the forestry laws, for every tree cut down another will be planted.

Filthy Temples in India.

Sacred cows often defile Indian temples, but worse yet is a body that is polluted by constipation. Don't permit it. Cleanse your system with Dr. King's New Life Pills and avoid untold misery. They give lively livers, active bowels, good digestion, fine appetite. Only 25c at Chas. Strang's drug store.

DOWN the TOBOGGAN SLIDE

By Charles Wiltstead

Copyright, 1907, by the S. S. McClure Company

"Father will have a cold drive from town tonight against that awful wind," remarked Mrs. Muir as she drew her chair up to the old-fashioned fireplace between her son and daughter. "Hope he won't come by the new road. The bridge over the ravine isn't just in proper shape yet."

"Listen! There are sleigh bells," interrupted George.

"It's not father," volunteered Mary. "He took the old harness with the sleigh bells."

"No," said George, winking at his mother; "those bells belong to Fred Watson, and you know it. Who is leading in the race now, sis—Ed Simpson or Fred?"

"Mother, make him believe," pleaded the girl.

"Oh, George, don't be such a tease! Open the door and help Fred put the horse up."

"Well, I am betting two to one on Simpson, Mary. He is a poor starter, but he'll finish strong," laughed the young man as he reached for his hat.

If Mary heard, she made no reply. In a moment he returned. "Sis," he shouted, "Fred has the colt hitched up to his new cutter, and he wants to know if you will go over to Thompson's."

"Not as far as Thompson's," answered Mrs. Muir. "It is too windy and cold, but if Fred has plenty of wraps you may drive down toward the village and come home with father."

The young people were soon speeding along the road. Near the ravine they came upon Ed Simpson, dragging a toboggan. Ed was passionately fond of the sport and generally went to the hills on the nights when Fred Watson was at the Muir home. Mary had a great fear of tobogganing and would not share his pleasure.

Fred Watson and Ed Simpson, according to village gossip, were both courting Mary. Mr. Muir was said to look with favor upon Fred. Simpson, on the surface, was more the friend of George than the lover of Mary. He had come up to Mayville from the city two years before to start a small commission store and was well liked by the farmers of the community. Fred was the son of rich Farmer Watson and did little else than drive a good horse.

Timid little Mary, if she had any preference, hid it successfully. And both men had vowed to have a definite answer soon.

"Going to the hills on a blowy night like this?" called Mary as they passed Simpson.

"Yes," came the good natured reply. "It takes worse weather than this to spoil sport for me."

The cutter sped on, and Ed plodded cheerily along the road, deep in thought.

Suddenly the jingle of bells ahead stopped. Looking up, Ed saw that some one was struggling to jump out of the cutter. It was a girl's figure. Instinctively Simpson rushed forward, dragging the toboggan behind him. As he came nearer he heard her gasp:

"Please—go. Drive like mad by the old road, and I will wait here and call to father should he come from the other side."

"No, Mary," answered Watson, "I will not go and leave you here."

"What's up?" cried Ed, hurrying to the side of the cutter.

"Oh, Mr. Simpson, the new bridge has given way in the center. There see, it has carried away the lights on the other end. If father should come this way, he would drive straight to death. Mr. Watson, please hurry! Oh, do!"

"Miss Mary," interrupted Ed, "let me stay here, and you drive round with Mr. Watson. This too cold for you to stand here."

"No, no! I would only be an added burden for the horse. Oh, why don't you drive on, Mr. Watson?"

"There is the light of a rig down at the second bend," cried Ed excitedly, pointing across the ravine. Then, with out another word, he seized the toboggan and rushed for the edge of the hill. Watson, realizing that time was precious, whipped up his horse and made for the old road around the ravine. The distance was fully two miles, but the rig on the other side was fully half a mile from the bridge, coming slowly. He might make it.

"You are too late, Watson," yelled Simpson. "Stay here with Mary. I will go down the ravine."

Watson was out of hearing, but Mary Muir took in the situation at a glance.

"Mr. Simpson," she called, running after him. "You must not! See! The wreck has fallen right across the foot of the slide, and you will rush to your death. Please don't go that way."

"I must. There is a slight opening there to the right, and I can make it in the moonlight. Besides, it's your father or me, and I can take the chance, for—he hesitated a second, then spoke hurriedly—"Watson will never catch him in time, but I will catch him at the foot of the first turn if all is well."

"Can't we call?" she asked appealingly.

"No. The wind is too strong from that direction."

"Then I am going with you, Ed."

Ed! She had never called him that before! "Mary, dear, it might mean your death. You must not come."

She laid her hand on his arm. "I am going. You can steer better with two on board. And, Ed, I know you will be more careful if I am with you."

Very gently and without further parley he placed her on the toboggan in front of him, then pushed the sled to the brink of the steep decline.

"Hold fast, little one," he said, "and before we leave"—He stooped over her and, raising her white face, kissed it tenderly. And then—they were off.

Like an arrow shot from the bow they sped over the snowy surface down to the bottom. Along the level they dashed for a few furlongs, straight through the only opening in the wreckage of the bridge, then over the icy surface of the creek, on, up the hill to the first turn of the road, then—crash!

Ed was dazed even as he scrambled to his feet.

"Hi, there!" called a voice. "Sure as shooting, you've killed that girl!"

A sturdy, heavy set man tumbled out of a rig and came running down the hill.

"You idiot, you ought to be jailed for this!" spluttered the old fellow in great excitement. But Ed heard not a word. He had Mary in his arms when the infuriated farmer seized him by the shoulder.

"She is killed, you young idiot, and I'll see that you hang for it! Give her to me, sir! Whose daughter is she, sir?" Then, as Simpson, recognizing the voice, turned about the old fellow exclaimed in surprise: "If it ain't you, Simpson, I'll be blamed! I always knew you for a venturesome idiot! And—my God—my Mary!"

"Hush, father, I am not hurt; not even a bit frightened. And please, father, don't abuse Ed that way. You would be thanking him if you knew what he risked for me—I mean for you."

Then, catching sight of Simpson's face, cut and bleeding, womanlike she turned from the embrace of her parent, threw her arms about her lover's neck and burst into tears.

"No, sir, he is not a young fool," said Mr. Muir emphatically as he drove home with Fred Watson, having turned his own rig over to the young couple. "Confound it, sir, he is a man in a thousand, and I am as good a judge of men as Mary, sir!"

Sensitive Gems. The discoloration of precious stones when they have been exposed to the air for a long time is considered one of the most frequent maladies. Emeralds, rubies and sapphires are those which remain intact best. Nevertheless, they are not exempt from changes. Turbidity of the same size and shape were kept for two years one in showcase and the other away from light. At the end of this term a comparison revealed that the first had come somewhat lighter in color.

The influence of light makes itself more plainly on topazes and garnets. The garnet turns much paler a short time, while the topaz assumes a darker shade and even loses the brilliancy possessed by it when fresh cut.

The most serious cause of discoloration is the opal. This stone draws marvelous rainbow reflections from numerous little clefts, which allow light to pass, and reflect it in different directions. Often the opal stands to manipulations of cutting and polishing. Well, and all of a sudden it splits.

Pearls deteriorate very easily. In the fire they are transformed into a piece of lime. Placed in contact with an acid they behave as lime or marble would under the same conditions.

Diamonds are less sensitive; still, it is not prudent to take them too near the fire.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

They Hang Out a Pincushion. In some of the cities of Holland, such as Haarlem, the birth of a child is announced to the neighbors and all who chance to pass by the curious custom of hanging a pincushion outside the door. If you walk past a house and see a white pincushion edged with lace and looking very dainty, you may understand that the number of inhabitants has been increased by one, and that one a girl.

When the happy couple are blessed with a boy, the color of the pincushion is red.

In Japan the people do something similar, yet more extensive. Outside the houses of a town you will see one or more paper fishes dangling and blowing in the wind. On making inquiry you are informed that the paper fishes represent the boys of the household. Every new boy means another fish. These imitations of the kol are decorated with colored silk and are thought a great deal of.

The fish which the Japanese call kol is noted for its courage and tenacity, and is therefore regarded as a fitting representation of the coming man.

A Purse For the Bride. Some brides may be inclined to regret that the old marriage custom of the dowry has fallen into disuse. It was the custom of the bridegroom to give a purse with a goodly sum of money and present it to the bride on the wedding day as the price of the purchase of her person. It sounds like sayers, like the buying of goods and chattels, yet the bride had a nice little sum of money for her own use.

Some of the oldest inhabitants of Cumberland may remember a similar custom in that county. The bridegroom provided himself with a number of gold and silver pieces, and at the words "with all my worldly goods I thee endow" he handed the clergyman his fee and poured the other coins into a handkerchief held out for that purpose by the bride.

In other places, again, the bride had the right to ask her husband for a gift of money or property on the day after the wedding, and he was bound in honor to grant the request.—London Answers.

Modern Preachers.

ARE THEY TO BE TRUSTED AND BELIEVED?

The only value of the question in the headline is to bring home the fact that of all classes of testimony, that offered by the clergy would be most promptly accepted without doubt or cavil. The clergy stand for truth and right, and thousands follow them living up to the same precepts of rectitude. These followers are no whit less truthful than their leaders. Yet because the preacher is a leader it is natural to give weight to his statements. His very position and respectability to his people, and the world at large not only forbid the thought of untruth in him, but lend emphasis to any voluntary declaration of fact which he may make.

If a pastor says to one of his congregations who is coughing, "I cured a very bad cough once by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," he could offer no stronger endorsement as to the value of that well-known medicine as a cure for coughs, and if such a pastor makes for the time the world his parish and puts out the same testimony as is only enlarging the scope of his beneficence. For if the world at large knew and was persuaded of the wonderful curative powers of "Golden Medical Discovery" in cases of diseases of the respiratory organs it would mean a great success in the general health and comfort, not to say a probable saving of a great many lives.

"THE BIBLE AS GOSPEL." It is "as good as gospel" that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures coughs, bronchitis, weak and bleeding lungs and such diseases of the respiratory organs through neglect or an ill-timed use of medicine. It is also true that the possibility of a cure cannot be seen when people who have great masses of mucus in the lungs are cured by the use of the "Discovery," there is certainly hope for one who may have had a severe hemorrhage. When some one is taken from the condemned cell into the local practitioner has shut him and from a weak, emaciated wreck restored to rugged health by the use of the "Discovery," it is impossible to shut the door of hope on any one however weak he may be. It is the record of such cures which has given Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery pre-eminence among all preparations for the cure of diseases of the organs of respiration.

"I desire to send you this brief, uncollected testimonial," writes Rev. J. H. Resperman, of Barium Springs, Irell Co., N. C. "In 1898, one of my daughters was suffering on account of a severe cough, hectic fever, wasting of flesh and other symptoms of diseased lungs. I promptly gave her Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with gratifying success, and she now enjoys excellent health. This experience caused me to recommend Dr. Pierce's medicine to my neighbors, who, without exception, used them with favorable results. This being true, I hereby heartily endorse your medicines."

It can be truly said of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery that it always helps and almost always cures. Ninety-eight per cent. of all who use "Golden Medical Discovery" are perfectly and permanently cured. The remaining two per cent. though not cured acknowledge appreciable benefit. They cough less, eat better, sleep better and feel better for the use of the "Discovery."

THE IMPORTANT POINT. While extreme cases of disease are cured by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery," the important point is not to neglect the slight cough. From such neglect fatal results have come to many thousands. It is useless to try the mere "cough medicine" or palliative, which soothes but does not cure. The one thing desirable is to be cured quickly and permanently, and it is in such cases that the "Discovery" proves its value.

"I took a severe cold which settled in the bronchial tubes," writes Rev. Frank Hay of Nortonville, Jefferson Co., Kansas. "After trying medicines labeled 'Sure cure,' almost without number, I was led to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took two bottles and was cured, and have stayed cured. When I think of the terrible cough I had, it seems almost a miracle that I was so soon relieved. That God may spare you many years and abundantly bless you is the prayer of your grateful friend."

Men or women suffering from disease in chronic form are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held in strict privacy and sacred confidence. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

This offer of free consultation by letter places at the disposal of the sick the skill and experience of nearly a score of the best physicians who are associated with Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician, to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Accept no substitutes for "Golden Medical Discovery." No other medicine is "just as good" for diseases of the organs of respiration.

"THE BIBLE OF THE HOLY" is a title that has been given to Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Advertiser. It is a perfect guide to the health of the body as the Bible is to the health of the soul. This great work contains more than a thousand large pages and over seven hundred illustrations, sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 31 cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume or only 21 cent stamps for the book in paper covers. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
