TO ORGANIZE A CRATER LAKE CLUB

To Advertise One of the World's Greatest Scenic Attractions. What this Club Can Do for Medford and This Valley.
 An organization that could be made of much benefit to Medford would be a Crater Lake Club, the membership to be composed of only such persons as have visited the lake. The principal object of the society would be to bring the wondrous attractions of Mount Mazama to the attention of pleasure seekers, and to see that Medford is made the outfitting point for all parties going to that famous resort. The other features of the club would be the having of an organized effort to keep the Medford-Crater lake road in repair and to maintain an intelligence bureau, where strangers could apply for information about Crater Lake Park and the cost of a trip to it. And last, but not least, the social features of the organization would be an attraction that would help materially in keeping up a live interest in the organization.
 If Crater lake was properly advertised it would equal Yellowstone Park as a national attraction, for its like is not to be seen in any part of the world. For years past the number of tourists going to the lake each season would have been more than double in numbers had there been some bureau where people at a distance could have found where they could get rigs and supplies and their cost and the distance to travel, the condition of the road, the probability of hardships in reaching the lake and the facilities for camping when there. All this could be answered in a neat pamphlet which should be illustrated with views along the road up Rogue river and of Crater lake. It could contain advertisements of reliable persons, who had camping outfits and rigs for hire and supplies to sell, which would yield a sum that would very materially lessen the cost of the publication.
 With the proper effort Medford could control the Crater lake tourist traffic, and it is a business well worth looking after. This town has every advantage in its favor to give a better service to tourists than any other town of Southern Oregon. It supplies Medford undersells all its competitors. As a place to secure rigs no other town in Southern Oregon can compare with Medford, for it has larger and better livery stables and the thickly settled farming district about the city make it possible to secure farm teams at reasonable cost. Then it has the best and nearest road to Crater lake and the only road that has scenic attractions along it. As an advertising medium for Medford, this tourist travel would be a most important factor for it would give these people the opportunity to see some of the many profitable advantages that Medford and this valley has to offer investors, and these tourists are usually people of means and many of them would be led to make investments in this section.
 The organization of a Crater Lake Club is a most important matter to Medford and it should be taken up at once so that the necessary advertising could be done before the next season opens.

Mount Pitt's Great Blow Hole.

W. L. and P. J. Halley, W. S. Clay and S. M. Drake arrived home Saturday from a hunting trip in the vicinity of Mt. Pitt. They had lots of fun and would have got lots of game had the game been less exclusive, and retiring in its habits. As it was they got a shot at a deer and saw the vanishing form of a brown bear as it went crashing through the brush to get away from their company. All hunting parties have to suffer at least one mishap and theirs came the last evening they were in camp. While engaged in the all-encompassing mysteries of preparing a bachelor's supper they heard the cracking of a falling tree that was standing high up on the hillside across a narrow ravine from their camp. A glance showed but the big tree was coming straight for their camp, so each man dropped his rifle and ran and made a precipitous dash for the sheltering side of the neighboring trees. Along with the party was a lanky hound pup that was having its first experience in the joys and dangers of rural life. The roaring of the falling trees, together with the shouts and rapid flight of the men threw the dog into a panic and with one despairing yell it disappeared in the forest and he has not been seen since. Mr. Halley has made diligent inquiries for his dog but can hear nothing of him and don't know if the dog is still on the run away in eastern Oregon or whether he dashed his brains out against a tree and has gone to dog heaven. But no damage was caused by the falling tree, though it fell within twelve feet of their campfire and came in an ace of striking some of the men.

While in the vicinity of Mt. Pitt the party ascended that famous peak. They made the trip up in four hours with no serious fatigue or danger, the descent being made in less than two hours. On the summit they found the Mazama's copper box and they added their names to the roll of that society. From the summit they had a magnificent view of Rogue river valley and of the surrounding mountains and the broad stretch of country to the east. They got a fine view of the great blow hole that is on the east side of the mountain, for Mt. Pitt has been a volcano and in its last spasm it blew a monstrous hole out from its side, leaving its summit intact. Its explosion differs from Mt. Mazama, which blew its entire summit off and the indications are that the explosion took place the same time. Such a terrific blast of heat came out of the Mt. Pitt blow hole that the surrounding rocks are burned as though they had been in a blast furnace, some being burned into pumice and others melted into glass. In this great cavity Mr. Halley states that the snow appeared to be at least a thousand feet deep.

Klamath County Items.

From the Klamath Falls Republican.
 Within the past week Messrs. Applegate and Armstrong have shipped to market in the neighborhood of 23,000 pounds of wool.
 Dr. G. B. Cole, of Central Point, was in this place Saturday on his return home from Merrill, near which place he owns a valuable ranch.
 We understand Ft. Klamath, Merrill and Bonanza are figuring on having race meetings this fall on dates that will not conflict with the main show which comes off at Klamath Falls in October.
 Potatoes are scarce and a luxury at present, the supply coming from the new crop grown in lower altitudes. The price is now four cents per pound, but soon local fields will furnish an abundance and the price will drop.
 Capt. Schoff, who ran the steamer Alma on the Upper Klamath lake last year, left Sunday for Medford, where he expects to make an effort to interest parties in an enterprise to build a new boat for that lake.
 The rush of timber applicants, tourist and other strangers into Klamath County at this time keeps the hotels crowded with guests and taxes the capacity of the livery stables. Hotel Linkville had to turn away twenty-two seekers for lodging Saturday night. The town was never so lively with strangers as now and the rush has only commenced.

MACKAY PASSES AWAY

LAST OF THE BONANZA KINGS IS CALLED.
 Dies of Heart Trouble in London— Was the Last of the Famous "Big Four."—California Loses One of its Most Famous Forty-Niners.

London, July 21.—John W. Mackay died at half past 6 o'clock last evening at his residence, 6 Carlton House terrace. He was in his seventy-second year.
 Mackay's death was unexpected, for, although he had been ill since Tuesday last, his physicians held out hope until yesterday that he would recover.
 The news of his death will be a great shock to his numerous friends, for Mackay as a rule enjoyed robust health. Less than a week ago he was actively engaged in directing the great interests with which he was connected. The immediate cause of death, according to the medical report, was heart failure. There were, however, symptoms of pneumonia. The left lung was badly congested.
 Mackay was taken ill on Tuesday last. He had been in the offices of the Commercial Cable company with Ward, and the two gentlemen went out to lunch. Mackay, who had been complaining that he did not feel well, was seized with a chill. Ward put him in a cab, brought him back to Carlton House terrace, and Mackay went to bed. The physicians who were called did not consider his condition as very serious. A denial was issued of a report which was current in the city that he was dangerously ill. The patient's condition seemed to improve a little on Wednesday and Thursday, although his heart from the first gave the physicians cause for concern.
 Saturday morning Sir Richard Douglas Powell, Dr. Jones and Dr. Orr were summoned and held a consultation. Everything possible was done for the sufferer, but despite all their efforts Mackay grew weaker and lapsed into unconsciousness, in which condition he remained until the end.
 In the passing of John William Mackay, the last of the "Big Four," the world of finance has lost one of its most notable leaders. The wide arena in which the great commercial nations play their games of chance and loss and profit is lacking by one on the list of its combatants for business supremacy.
 California has lost greatly, too, for the death of Mackay means nothing less than the disappearance of one of the earliest, most successful and best distinguished of her pioneers. Wherever the name of Mackay had been heard, there also was the name of John Mackay linked with it. And it was a small and mighty insignificant place that had not at least a trifle of knowledge of that famous mining camp.
 Mackay was a Dublin man, with some of the Irish and a bit of the Scotch blood in him. He was born in the Irish capital November 28, 1831. He was only ten years old when his parents decided that their condition might be improved by emigration to this country. Their first place of residence in the United States was New York. The family prospered in a small degree for a couple of years, when the elder Mackay died and his wife was left with the burdens of supporting herself and her children.
 It was but a short time afterward when news of the gold discovery in California reached the eastern cities, and young Mackay was immediately up and astrif for adventures new and golden pastures. In 1851 he arrived in San Francisco, having come from New York with James C. Flood and William O'Brien.
 The history of Mackay's struggles and triumphs in California are well known and read like a romance.
