FEAST ON BEAR AND POSSUM

PRESIDENT SITS DOWN TO HIS CAMP MENU WITH SHORTAGE OF KNIVES AND FORKS.

Smedes, Miss., Nov. 17.—Sunday was a quiet day at the president's camp on Little Sunflower. There was no hunt, but the president and several members of the party spent a couple of hours rambling over the forest trails on their horses. Dinner was the chief event of the day. The menu included roast bear paws and possum and sweet potatoes. Dinner was served in camp style, on a rough pine board table set up in the open air. Tin plates and tin cups were used. There were not enough knives and forks to go around and the colored cook announced to the amusement of everybody as the party sat down, that on account of the scarcity of the articles he had distributed them only to the "Colonel" (as the president is invariably called in camp), and the "foreign gentlemen."

The president is enjoying his outing very much. He has not had three days of such complete freedom and rest since he entered the White House.

Hoke Collier's "dander" is up, and he vows that the "Colonel" will not go home empty handed. His dogs had a good rest yesterday and are in fine condition to resume the chase today.

ILLINOIS SAILS.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 17.—The United States battleship Illinois has joined the squadron mobilizing here for the South Atlantic maneuvers. The squadron now in Norfolk and Hampton Roads is made up of the battleships Illinois, Alabama, Kearsarge, Massachusetts, Indiana and Texas and the cruisers Detroit, Cincinnati and San Francisco and several converted yachts and gunboats, together with a large torpedo fleet.

Could Not Determine Cause of Death.

San Rafael—The inquest on the death of Patrick Lunny, who was found in a dying condition near the North Shore railroad tracks a week ago, was held Saturday by Coroner Eden. The jury was unable to decide on the cause of death.

Boy Injured by Electric Current.

Los Angeles—In passing at Ohio and Second streets Saturday, Dr. William Dodge, a physician, saw a boy prostrate in the middle of the street. Investigation showed that he held in one hand a live telephone wire, which had fallen across an electric power wire, and became short circuited. It is feared the boy cannot recover.

Ho Yow Sails for His Home Land.

San Francisco—Ho Yow, former Chinese consul at this port, was tendered an ovation by his fellow countrymen when he departed for the Orient Saturday on the steamer Gaelic. Members of the Chinese consulate and the Six Companies, attired in their richest raiment, escorted the diplomat to the steamer.

Heir Found Working on a Ranch.

Marysville—John Schwartz, for whom agents have been searching during the past two or three months in order that a valuable estate left him by his mother, who lately died in Germany, could be transferred, has been located on a ranch near Dunningham, Yolo county, where he has been working as a common laborer.

Valuable Minerals Found.

San Jose—Recent investigations by mining experts ... show that important ... ces of S... ast be given to the resources of Santa Clara county. The most important discovery is the location of an abundance of copper. Ten tons sent to the smelter in San Francisco returned copper to the value of $27.50 a ton, $2 to $5 in gold and $2 to $3 in silver.

PRESIDENT'S SON FORCED TO LEAVE SCHOOL.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Theodore Roosevelt Jr., son of the president, is coming to Washington to spend a week, that his eyes may be given a rest. Mrs. Roosevelt received a message from the master of the school at Groton, Mass., where the boy is attending, announcing that his eyes were troubling him, and suggesting a rest. He said Theodore might go to Washington for a week, if Mrs. Roosevelt desired. She at once telegraphed the master to let him come here.

It is denied at the White House that doctors are accompanying him on the train, and it is said that no operation of any kind will be performed. The boy's coming will not interfere with the president's plans in any way.

DUMAS AS A COOK.

He Was Particularly Good In the Preparation of Turkeys.

Dumas pere was in producing the slave of his pen and never studied in his life. No author ever owed less to education or book learning and more to a perpetually fresh and unsophisticated mind and to sociable intercourse with the bright spirits of his day, the upper Bohemia, the best artists, dramatic authors and lions of various kinds of his time. His one accomplishment was his neat, flowing, clerkly handwriting, but he knew nothing of science, of any kind of serious literature, and as he had never thought of punctuation before he burst on the world as an author left it always to the proofreader. Like Rossini, if Dumas had not been the author of "Monte-Christo" and other novels that brought him each a fortune (which he spent as soon as he made), he might have been a great cook.

I partook of a lunch he cooked two years before his death at the house of Gudin, the painter. He came to cook it in this way: Gudin, meeting him on a Friday on the boulevard, said: "A friend has just sent me three splendid turkeys from Devonshire. What shall I do with them?" "You should let me cook them," said Dumas. "All right." "But I must go tomorrow to prepare them for the spit." Dumas arrived next morning with a hamperful of truffles for the turkeys and, not to allow any to go to waste, brought calves' sweetbreads and other delicacies which are the better for truffle accompaniments. He prepared his "plats" carefully and suggested that if Gudin wished to invite friends to a particularly well cooked lunch then was his time. "Perhaps," he added, "you had better call on Alboni and ask her to come. She will crown the feast by singing a brindisi." So said, so done. Dumas acted as chef in the kitchen until it was almost time to serve the lunch.

A most brilliant company had been invited to judge of "le grand Alexandre's" culinary talents. They declared he deserved the name of "Alexandre le Grand" and expressed their sorrow that his literary genius had deprived the world of the greatest chef of the nineteenth century. Dumas used also to cook the grand dinners which Mme. Rattazzi gave at Florence when her husband was prime minister of Italy.—London News.

OLD FASHIONED.

What has become of the old fashioned man who dressed up to serve on the jury?

What has become of the old fashioned woman who thought going to a circus was sinful?

Speaking of old fashioned things, what has become of the child who minded its mother?

What has become of the little old schoolgirl whose braids were so short and stumpy they were called pigtails?

What has become of the old fashioned woman who used to say to her children, "You'll drive me distracted?"

What has become of the old fashioned man who, according to the neighbors, could lie as fast as a horse could trot?

What has become of the old fashioned man who came to town wearing a soldier overcoat, with a buffalo lap robe in his wagon?

What has become of the old fashioned woman who used to say that a little bird came and told her when asked where she heard a piece of gossip?—Atchison Globe.

Onion Sauce.

As a change from the tomato sauce usually served with breaded lamb chops try an onion sauce made in this way: Slice two or, if very small, three onions and cook them in water for a few moments and drain. Put them into just enough boiling water to cover, add a little salt and cook until tender. Cook together two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter and when perfectly smooth add one-half pint of stock, three or four tablespoonfuls of cream and a saltspoonful each of salt and sugar and a dash of cayenne. When the onion is tender, press it through a colander and add the water in which it had been cooked.—New York Post.

Starting the Conversation.

"I don't know what the trouble is," said the hostess in a tone of great annoyance. "My guests seem very distant and unsocial. I wish I could think of some way to start them talking to one another."

"That's very easily done," answered Miss Cayenne. "Is there a musician present?"

"Yes."

"Get him to play or sing something."—Washington Star.

The Lapse of Time.

When two married men who haven't seen each other for some time meet, one of them always says before they separate, "Let's see—how old is your oldest now?" And then, after he gets the answer, he adds, "It is astonishing, isn't it, how time does fly?"—Somerville (Mass.) Journal.
