Kedol does for the atomach that which it is unable to do for itself, even when but slightly disordered or over-loaded. Kodol supplies the natural juices of digestion and does the work of the stomach, relaxing the nervous tension, walle the inflamed muscles of that organ are allowed to rest and heal. Kodol digests what you cat and enables the stomagh and digestive organs to transform all food into rich, red blood. Chas. Strang.

Sometimes it happens that a sever shock restores health to persons who are suffering from nervous prostration and this is how the phenomenon is ex-plained in a foreign medical journal:

"Every external stimulus impresses the afferent centripetal fibers, or, reth er, excites the molecular waves change. The latter in turn decompos the unstable molecules of a flexus and, through the intervention of other fibers, this decomposition, being the source of new molecular movements gives an impulse to a certain mass of connected flexus.

The new vibratory modification thus obtained forms a new nervous fluid. A portion of the current flows over the afferent fibers to the contractile cles of the periphery, while the other portion is propagated by the reverber ramified centers of the organic econo my, and thus a complete and natural nervous diffusion takes place."

Physicians, of course, understand what this means, but how many laymen can interpret it?

It is a combination of the healing properties of Witch Hazel with antiseptics and emollionts; relieves and permanently cures blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles, sores, cuts, bruises, eczema, salt rheum and all skin diseases. CHARGING the . ENEMY

By Martin McCallock-Will richt, 1905 by A. S. Pilolandson ******************

Old Gib Exell went swinging and stumping upon his crutches down the street and up the steps of his store. It was the biggest store in town, though not the smartest. Joe Beenam, who had opened up the spring before, just across the street, was running old Gib hard in groceries and hardware and leaving him out of sight when it came to knickknacks or dry goods pure and simple.

Truth is always consistent with itself and needs nothing to help it out. It is always near at hand, sits upon our lips himself, what a pity! Another man who knew also looked, listened to the exclamation and answered it, sticking out his chin as he spoke, "Better say, What a shame!"

"Maran shame, doc'll a third said. coming up behind them. Doctor Wa-ters smilled half grimly. "I'm not quite sure—it seems to be the bitch in the course of a true love," he answered.

Lew Bayne, the man who had spoken first, shook his head energetically. "I meant that poor old fellow's legs," he said..."I suppose, doc, it's certain he'll never walk again."

"Now you've got me," the doctor pro-tested. "I'd risk my professional rep-utation that fall he got on the sleety payenest did no worse harm to his shrunden shanks than bark them up pretty generally. There were bruises, of course, and on the shoulder and side as well. I told him he'd be out and about in plenty time for the Christmas trade, but from the first he stood me up and down that he'd peyer take an-other steady step, and so far, I'm bound to admit, he was right. There's nothing on earth the matter with his nothing on earth the matter with his legs, nothing at least that I or the oth-er doctors can see. Against that there is the fact that the minute he tries to stand on them they do the joint rule act—double under him as though they hadn't strength to bear up a spider. The trouble must lie in the nerves. If that's what you meant. I agree with you that it's a pity. I thought you had reference to the trick he's played on Joe Beenam."

What is it?" asked Merton, the third of the group. "You know I've been away six months! Tell me all about It."

'Not much to tell," Dr. Waters said "You know Florrie Ezeil"—
"I ought to, considering she sent m

"You've hit it," the doctor said, "Joe did stand out mighty well against th

Merton, a newly evolved drummer, had given what he would have called 'a comprehensive order." Dr. Waters also chuckled as he answered, nodding his head by way of emphasizing his points: "Well, you see, it's this way: The hour struck for Joe when he saw Florrie Ezell swirling around, a blue tarlatan angel, in a waltz with Bob Acton at the Pattons' party. Florrie's a pretty girl anyway you see her. That night she was particularly fetch-ing. But that wasn't the thing. I insist Joe's time had come. He knew it Soon as the waltz was over he froze to Florrie-didn't get a yard away from her all the evening."

"It was a freezing time, as I remember," Lew Bayne interrupted, with a "Indian summer up to dusk; then a cold rain, that turned to sleet in short order. Say, didn't old Gib get his fall that very night?"

"I'm coming to that, if you'll wait," the doctor ran on. "I tell you that was a sleet to remember. Joe, of course, wouldn't let Florrie walk home, though house is only six blocks from the Pattons'. No, siree! He telephoned for the finest rig at the livery stable and bundled all that blue tariatan in it as snug as you please. I heard Flor-rie protesting that she ought really to wait for papa, but we all persuaded her papa wouldn't think of risking himself upon pavement like glass. We ought to have known better. Old Gib always does the thing that any other man would let alone."

"Bet a but he came," Merton said, chuckling more than ever.

"You win-from yourself," Dr. Waters answered. "He came, he didn't see his daughter, he went back swear ing like a trooper, though he is a den-con, and he fell right before Master Joe's fine rig, coming back from leaving Miss Florrie safe at the gate. Of course Joe picked him up and carried him home. Equally, of course, old Glb hates him for doing it. By the time I got to him next morning he was fully persuaded Joe was at the bottom of his fall, with Florrie as accessory; said they ran away and left him, hoping he'd break his neck, so Joe could have both his daughter and his store. You know he didn't take overkindly to competition anyway"-"That he didn't! Why, he even wrote to our credit man to keep a peeled eye on Joe," Merton interrupt-

"That's like him," Dr. Waters said "I tell you, boys, nature must work along a certain line of compensation. I'm sure she slapped into old Gib all the small meannesses due to two generations of Ezells—it may even be three. His father was a fine man, and his daughter is just as good a woman an ever was made. "About Joe, now?" Merton queried. Dr. Waters frowned:

"Joe courted Plorrie with such a rush that in a week they were engaged. Then be went right in to old Gib and had it out with him-told him all about himself and his business, in and out, up and down-but the substance of it was he wanted Florrie for his wife, and would do whatever old Gib said 'f only he could get her. And then the sid crocodile pretended to cry; said Florrie was all he had to live for; he heard to be sent the side of the said to live for; he hoped Joe wouldn't press him for an answer then, nor, indeed, talk of an engagement until he was either dead or himself again. You know how soft hearted old Joe is, and how he hange on to his word once he passes it. Of course he promised, never mistrusting the old wretch was playing him. So there you are! Florrie's worrying and losing color because Joe only speaks when they pass by, but don't come to the house. Joe's about desperate, and old Gib is fattening and getting ten years younger on spite and crutches. What the end is to be nobody can "Can old Gib be shamming?" Merton asked. Dr. Waters shook his head. "I thought so at first," he said. "But if he is it beats anything in the books. There's certainly nothing wrong with his lega, except that they're a bit flabby. It's equally as certain he can't walk on them. I think sometimes he has hypnotised himself. If it was just deceit and what I call cussedness, I would have been able before this to take him off his guard."

"Well, I can at least go over and con-dole with Joe." Merton said, stepping across the street. "And maybe sym-pathy will be worth an order," he called hade over his shoulder. called back over his shoulder as he struck the store steps.

Although it was late March, it was still nipping cold. A red fire roared in the base burner inside old Gib's store the base burner inside old Gib's store. Old Gib himself sat close beside it, his sye ranging all the miscellaneous mer-chandles which crowded shelves and floor. His three clerks had been on the jump all morning, but toward noon there came a lull. He was about to send two of them off to dinner when the door opened wide, and Merton came through, with Joe Beenam in his wake and Dr. Waters and Lew Bayne marching solemnly behind. Joe's face was white, his eyes brilliant, his figure tense in every line. Indeed he looked desperate, and his voice rang hard as he said, stopping short three feet

"Mr. Ezell, I have come to ask you. here in the presence of these witnesses, to release me from my promise. know well how it was given-with a total misapprehension of the truth."

"You mean you want to take my daughter, as well as my trade, and leave me, a cripple, to starve!" old Gib roared.

Joe set his teeth. "I menn nothing of the sort!" he said. "Give me your daughter, and our home shall be yours. I will serve and care for you as I would for my own father"—

"You won't get the chance," old Gib sneered. Joe half turned to his friends and whispered sepulchrally: "Go away!

"Going to murder me, hey?" old Gib sniffed.

Joe stood very straight. The others had slunk toward the door, with the awed clerks huddling after. They heard Joe shout:

"It is not murder! I shall give my life to free Florrie from your intolerable tyranny!"

Then they saw him fling wide the stove door and dash into it what seemed like several pounds of gun-

Old Gib saw it too. With one wild, whooping yell he leaped from his chair. regardless of crutches, of everything but flight, rushed madly for the door, darted through it and did not pause until he came panting and trembling to his own gate. As he clung there the others overtook him, as breathless as himself betwixt running and laughing.

Dr. Waters made a low bow. had thought three pounds of black sand would be so effectual, I would have had you well long ago," he said.

Merton dragged Joe forward, "If you want to kick anybody, kick me," he said to old Gib. "I put this lad," he said to old Gib. "I put this lad," patting Joe's shoulder, "up to playing you that trick."
"Humph! I knew he didn't have the brains for it himself," old Gib snorted. But, though he had found his legs, he was none the less old Gib. The fuet was proved by his letting Joe and Florrie marry almest out of hand and presenting them with both his store and his blessing.

Lord Brampton, when he was Mr Justice Hawkins, when on circuit, fine ing a long summer evening drag on his hands, took a turn in the lanes, and, staying at a rural inn for a cup of tea, staying at a very interior a cup of tea, his ears were assailed by the charmed sound of the falling affrepins. With a lively eagerness he inquired of the landlord if there was an alley on the premises. By way of answer the landlord conducted him thither. The goodly company assembled eyed the newcomer with greedy eyes, think-ing they would lead him on to an advantageous game.

The learned Judge at once acceded to
