SAN FRANCISCO STORM CENTER

COURSE OF ADMINISTRATION IN POSTAL SCANDALS.

EXPECT MORE INDICTMENTS

One Official Threatens to Disclos Name of a Former Western Con preseman, and Says He Will Nam-Others Who Are Gullty.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The storm center of the great postoffice depart ment scandal has shifted politically to the San Francisco postoffice.

One of the indicted former official of the postoffice department made the statement that at his trial, which will come up shortly, he would name a former congressman "who should have been indicted, together with others who have been indicted."

The former official who made this statement had the most intimate relations for years with this "administration" member of congress. He proposes to make his dramatic announce ment to prove his belief that, as he says, "the administration is indicting some people, but is taking care of its friends." There is no question that the former congressman referred to has been a constant friend of the administration for many years, and some people here have been wondering why the inspectors have not been able to get sufficient evidence against him. The course of the administration in the postoffice at San Francisco, it is stated, is the one which is being most closely watched by those who assert they are sacrifices to save others. It is inconceivable here that there will be only one indictment on the postal device and improvement scandal of San Francisco. There is, however, the best of reasons to believe that the indicted official here who is exasperated by the trend of events in that case will name a western congressman and that the explosion, as it were will be heard from one end It were, will be heard from one end of the country to the other. The arrest of State Senator Green of New York on the serious charge of bribery and conspiracy with George W. Beavers has brought up again prominently the equestion, "Did Bea vers and Machen act autocratically is the matter of making big contracts or did they consult with the higher officials?" The four-year contract with the Bondy Time Lock company was made when J. W. Johnson of New Jersey was first assistant post master general, and it is now hinter that the matter was first broaches when Perry Jeath held the same of fice in 1897. Rheumatism

Those who have ever felt its keen, cutting pains, or witnessed the intense suffering of others, know that Rheumatism is torture, and that it is rightly called "The King of Pain."

All do not sufferalike. Some are suddenly seized with the most excruciating pains, and it seems every muscle and joint in the body was being torn asunder. Others feel only occasional slight pains for weeks or months, when a sudden change in the weather or exposure to damp, chilly winds or night air brings on a fierce attack, lasting for days perhaps, and leaving the patient with a weakened constitution or crippled and deformed for all time. An acid, polluted condition of the blood is the cause of every form and variety of Rheumatism, Muscular, Articular, Acute, Chronic, Inflammatory and Sciatic, and the blood must be purged and purified before there is an end to your aches and pains. External applications, the use of liminents and plasters, do much toward temporary relief, but such treatment does not reach the real cause or cleanse the diseased blood; but S. S. S. the greatest of all blood purifiers and tonics, does cure Rheumatism by antidoting and neutralizing the poisonous acids and building up the weak and sluggish blood. It is safe and reliable in all forms of Rheumatism. It makes the old acid blood rich, and the pain-tortured muscles and joints are relieved, the shattered nerves are made strong, and the entire system is invigorated and toned up by the use of this great vegetable remedy. If you have Rheumatism, write us, and our physicians will furnish witheut charge any information desired, and we will mail free our book on Rheumatism.

Coppright, 16th, by T. C. McClure Half way between the Crescent ranch and the schoolhouse lay the western border of the Black Hawk range. If Don Easton happened to ride to the ridge of low, ragged butter above the little valley trail he could catch a glimpse of the new schoolteacher's hat with the violets on it when little Sammle Trent took her to and fro in the buckboard from the ranch to the

"Is she homely, Sammie?" Don asked gently.

Sammie shut one eye and clucked his tongue hungrily.

"Gimme two crackers and a dried herring and I'll tell," he said.

Don bargained and handed over two crackers with the herring laid between. Sammie munched contentedly, it was a long way from the ranch.

It was a long way from the ranch.
"Her hair's kind of pretty. It don't curl up exactly, but it kinks a little when the wind blows. And it's brown, when the wind blows. And it's brown, kind of. And she smiles aweet as any thing, and her eyes are blue, kind of, and she's awful gritty. She's learning to ride, and she fell off once and never yowled a bit."

A week after this the buckboard was discarded, and Don saw Sammie rid-by on the pinto, while the schoolteach er was on a small lightweight black and white pony. Sometimes she went by alone, as the days passed and her by alone, as the days passed and her confidence grew. Don would leave the sheep with the dogs and watch for her at smaset, lying face downward in the soft, thick grass on the edge of the buttes. He could see her from the time she passed the cottonwoods that fringed the divide until she turned the corner of Big Butte far down the valley, and beyond the way was clear to the ranch. the ranch.

But she rode on beside him fearlessly until they had passed scattered, frightened groups of what sheep were left, and halted beside the smoking ruins of the herder's wagon. It was she who found him first, lying unconscious a dozen wards from the wagon. she who found him first, lying unconscious a dozen yards from the wagon. There was a wound in his forebead. While Sammie stood with wide, scared eyes, she told him to run to the creek and bring water, then to ride on to the ranch for help.

With the water Sammie had brought her she bathed the wound and kept his parched lips moist, and the black and white pony moved up and down like a realiess shadow between her and the charrest wagon.

Once he opened his eyes and stared up at her in wonder, and she laid her hand lightly on his hot forchead.

A little after moon rise there came the thud of hoofs on the ground and the one vigil was ended. Next morning sammle's freekled face tooked cauiously in the open window of com at the ranch where the herder "Hello, Iton." he said cheerfully.

"Ain't she got grit, though? Ain't she a thoroughbred?" Don smiled at him in proud assent, and moved his bandaged head in a half nod.

"When is she coming to study chapter 5" asked Sammle in a whisper.
