BFORE night closed their third day on the island Jenks man-aged to construct a roomy tent B honse, with a framework of rdy trees selected on account of in location. To these he nailed or a crossbeams of felled saplings, and sturdy tied crossbeams of felled saplings, and the tarpauling dragged from the beach supplied roof and walls. It required the united strength of Iris and himself to haul into position the heavy sheet that topped the structure, while he was compelled to desist from active building operations in order to fashion a rough ladder. Without some such contrivance he could not get the topmost supports adjusted at a sufficient height

Although the edifice required at least two more days of hard work before it would be fit for habitation Iris wished to take up her quarters there immedi-stely. This the sallor would not hear

"In the cave," he said, "you are ab solutely sheltered from all the winds that blow or rain that falls. Our villa, however, is painfully leaky and drafty at present. When asleep, the whole body is relaxed, and you are then most open to the attacks of cold or fever, in which case, Miss Deane, I shall be reat present. luctantly obliged to dose you with a concoction of that tree there." He pointed to a neighboring cincho-na, and Iris naturally asked why he selected that particular brand.

"Because it is quinine, not made up nice little tabloids, but au naturel, will not be a bad plan if we prepare a strong infusion and take a small quantity every morning on the excel-lent principle that prevention is better than cure

Carlously enough, the lifting of the ell upon the man's earlier history ande these two much better friends. With more complete acquaintances there was far less tondency toward cer-tain passages which under ordinary conditions could be construed as nothing else than downright flirtation. Thenceforth for ten days they labored unceasingly, starting work at daybreak and stopping only when the light failed, finding the long hours of sunshine all too short for the manifold tasks de manded of them, yet thankful that the night brought rest. The sailor made out a programme to which he rigidly adhered. In the first place, he com-pleted the house, which had two com-partments—an inner room, in which Iris slept, and an outer, which served as a shelter for their meals and provided a bedroom for the man.

Then he constructed a gigantic sky sign on Summit rock, the small cluster of bowlders on top of the cliff. His chief difficulty was to holst into place the tall poles he needed, and for this urpose he had to again visit Palm ree rock in order to secure the pulley. By exercising much ingenuity in devis ing shear-legs he at last succeeded in lifting the masts into their allotted re-

Jenks knew a good deal of botany and enough about birds to differentiate between carnivorous species and those fit for human food, while the suit in their most fortunate supply of hams rendered their meals almost epicurean From the rusty rifles on the reel Jenks brought away the bayonets and secured all the screws, bolts and other small odds and ends which might be serviceable. From the barrels he built handy grate to facilitate Iris' cook ing operations, and a careful search each morning amid the ashes of any burned wreckage accumulated a stor f most useful nails. The pressing need for a safe yet ac-

the pressing need for a site yet ac-cessible bathing place ied him and the girl to devote one afternoon to a com-plete survey of the coast line. By this time they had given names to all the chief localities. The northeriy promon-tory was naturally christened North came the western Eurona point: the cape; the western, Europa point; the portion of the reef between their habitation and Palm Tree rock became Filey Brig; the other section Northwest reef. The fint sandy passage across the island, containing the cave, house and well, was named Prospect park, and the extensive stretch of sand on the southeast, with its guard of broken reefs, was at once dubbed Turtle beach when Jenks discovered that an immense number of green turtles were onying their spring visit to the island to bury their eggs in the sand.

"Oh," cried Iris excitedly, "what a lovely spot, a perfect Smugglers' covel" "Charming enough to look at." was the answering comment, "but open to the sea. If you look at the smooth pi-band of water out there you will per-ceive a passage through the reef. A great place for sharks, Miss Deane, but no place for bathers." They passed on. While traversing the coral strewn south beach, with its patches of white soft sand baking in sweet voiced greeting, and he knew with a fierce devouring joy, that he the direct rays of the sun, Jenks per-ceived traces of the turtle which swarmed in the neighboring ses.

"Delicious eggs and turtle soup!" he announced when Iris asked him why he was so intently studying certain marks on the sand, caused by the great sea tortoise during their nocturnal vis-fts to the breeding ground.

"If they are green turtle," he con-tinued, "we are in the lap of luxury. They lard the alderman and inspire the poet. When a ship comes to our assistance I will persuade the captain to freight the vessel with them and make my fortune." "I suppose, under the circumstances.

But there were stores on board, Jeaks remembered that Captain Ross foresight had secured the provisioning of all the ship's boats soon after the first wild rush to steady the after the propeller was lost. Masts, sails, oars, scats-all save two water casks-had gone, but Jenks, with eager hands, unfastened the lockers, and here he found a good supply of tinned ments and biscuits. They had barely recovered from the excitement of this find when the sailor noticed that be-hind the rocks on which the eraft was firmly lodged lay a small natural basin full of salt water, replenished and freshened by the spray of every gale and completely shut off from all seaward access. It was not more than four feet deep, seautifully carpeted with sand and secluded by rocks on all sides. Not the tiniest erab or fish was to be seen. It

"You give your advice ungraciously," she said, "but I will adopt it nevertheless.'

A harmless incident, a kindly and quite feminine resolve, yet hig with fate for both of them.

Jenks' unwonted ill humor-for the passage of days had driven from his face all its harshness and from his tongue all its assumed bitternesscreated a passing cloud until the phys-ical excition of scratabiling over the rocks to remain the North case restored

He gathered all the tins he was able to carry and strode off, enjoining her-to fire her revolver if for the slightest renson she wanted assistance, and giv ing a parting warning that if she de layed too long he would come and shout to her. "I wonder," said the girl to herself.

watching his retreating figure, "what he is afraid of. Surely by this time we have exhausted the unpleasant sur-prises of the island. Anyhow, now for a splash!"

She was hardly in the water before she began to be afraid on account of Jenks. Suppose anything happened to him while she was thoughtlessly enjoy ing herself here! So strongly did the thought possess her that she hurriedly dressed again and ran off to find him. He was engaged in fastening a num-ber of bayonets transversely to a long piece of timber.

"What are you doing that for?" she nsked.

"Why did you return so soon? Did anything alarm you?" "I thought you might get into mis-chief," she confessed.

"No. On the other hand, I am trying to make trouble for any unwelcome visitors." he replied, "I intend to set this up in front of our cave in case we are compelled to defend ourselves against an attack by savages. With this barring the way they cannot rush the position."

On the nineteenth day of their resi-dence on the island the sailor climbed. Summit rock while Iris prepared breakfast. At this early hour the borizon was clearly cut as the rim of a sap-phire. He examined the whole arc of the sea with his glasses, but not a sail was in sight. According to his calcu-lations the growing anxiety as to the fate of the Sirdar must long ere this have culminated in the dispatch from Hongkong or Singapore of a special
