Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphicus setting forth the merits of the medi-cine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkham sons in Boston, New York, and Brookiyn. The mediarile comparison prometies of

In 1877, by combined efforts the fam-fly had saved enough money to com-mence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until to-day Lydia E. In 1648 she married Isaac Pinkham, a builder and real estate operator, and their early married life was marked by prosperity and happiness. They had four children, three sons and a daughter. Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but not till she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself. In those good old fashioned days it

During her long and eventful expe-rience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to pre-serve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every side woman who applied to her for advice— and there were thousands—received careful study, and the details, includ-ing symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundred of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collabora-tion of information regarding the treatment of woman's lins, which for authonicity and accuracy can hardly be equaled in any library in the world. In these good oin tashoned days it was common for mothers to make their own home medicines from roots and herbs, nature's own remedies— calling in a physician only in specially urgent cases. By tradition and ex-perience many of them gained a won-derful knowledge of the curative prop-etties of the various roots and herbs. Mrs. Pinkham took a grant interest interest erties of the various roots and herbs. Mrs. Pinkham toolc a great interest in the study of roots and herbs, their characteristics and power over disease. She maintained that just as nature so bountifully provides in the invrest-fields and orchards vogetable foods of all kinds; so, if we but take the pains to find them, in the roots and herbs of the field there are remedies ex-pressly designed to cure the various ills and weaknesses of the body, and it was her pleasure to search these out, and prepare simple and effective medi-ciess for her own family and friends. She was carefully instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence. To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when its origina-tor passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued it, and nothing in the work shows when the first Lydia E. Pinkham dropped her pen, and the present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, took it up.
