NATURE'S WORD SYMBOLS.

Beauties of Land and Sea Cannot Be Told in Words. Colors, sights and sounds of nature put in words shrivel and lose their vitality. Odors of the forest, breezes from the sea, delicate aromas of the dawn, exhalations from dew laden fields, entrancing pure breath of infancy—how can we find among dumb, inexpressive human words any fair equivalent, any just translation of such rare effects and sensations in the world of nature as these? How shall we interpret myriad shades of one color in the few words at our command? How shall we put the feeling and the ecstasy of nature into the formula of mental apprehension and into the terms of literary expression?

It is as hopeless a task as if one stood as interpreter beside some charming poet of alien tongue and could catch only here and there a word and could render that word only by some uncounted paraphrase or by some term of remote or unaccepted meaning. What charm, what coherence even, could we find in such inadequate transference to another sphere of what was so beautiful in its own? So to say that the sea is blue does indeed give a certain impression of one color rather than another and in a crude way suggests a general tint to our mental vision. But how opaque and dead is the one word "blue" when held up as the reflecting mirror to our minds of that world of translucent sapphire glory left down from heaven upon earth, air and ocean—that suffusion of azure from cerulean reservoirs which encreases nature on rare midsummer days! We have seen such flooding molten turquoise light like gems liquefied and poured over seas, coast, mountain and plain when it has seemed as if the chalice of the angels of the ether and the sun kept pouring down new tides of graded sky tones or the gloried landscape. We have seen rock and flower, cloud and tree, hill and valley, swim and seem to flow in every gradation of the great monotone of color around us, while bar after bar of indigo, violet, blue, lay far upon the sea, reentering in a thousand changing shades that end of the rainbow gamut of color in the endless enchantments of its tremulously sliding, blending, ever overlapping, infinitely shaded scale.

Oh, again, take the word silence as the image of that great, flat breathing, resonant stillness of the forest far from the dwelling of men. How flat and unresponsive and echoless is the word symbol when hung up as the silvery sounding board of what nature calls her stillness. The term silence is but a dumb interpreter of the serene, soundless, on going life in the deep woods. In that silence there is speech of thousand tongues, inaudible and voiceless, complex and intricate, as the flexured interweaving of leafy branches overhead or the gray and gold green tints that sift down upon the ragged rocks and lichened rocks that roughen her forest aisles—Christian Work.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS. A man isn't beaten as long as he isn't discouraged. Most family skeletons refuse to stay in the closet. Be sure that you have an aim in life before pulling the trigger. Never do any worrying today that you can just as well postpone until tomorrow. When a man gets a chance to dispose of his troubles he always heaps up the measure. Yes, you may draw the salary, but your wife earns half the money; don't forget that. Of course it's all right to be born a leader, but the man in the rear has a better opportunity to get away. Many a city chap laughs when he hears of a farmer buying a gold brick. Then he goes to the race track and hands over his money to the book-makers—Chicago News.

The Printer's Devil. Why is the printer's errand boy called the "printer's devil"? According to Moxen, writing at the end of the seventeenth century, because "these boys in a Printing House commonly black and dawb themselves whence the Workmen do Jocosefully call them Devils, and sometimes Sprits, and sometimes Flies." It is related, however, that Aldo Manuzio, the great Venetian printer of the fifteenth century, had a black slave boy, who was popularly supposed to have come from below. Accordingly he published a notice: "Aldo Manuzio, printer to the doge, has this day made public exposure of the printer's devil. All who think he is not flesh and blood may come and pinch him."

Dean Swift on Astrology. Dean Swift predicted the death upon a particular date of Partridge, the chief of the astrological almanac makers, and followed it with the announcement of his demise on that very date. Poor Partridge protested in vain that he was still alive, for the brilliant author of "Gulliver's Travels" assured him by the logic of his own pretended science that he must actually have ceased to exist.

The Case With Him. Mrs. Henpeck—They can't punish bigamy too severely. No one should have any sympathy for the man who takes one wife too many. Mr. Henpeck—The idea, Maria! Do you think I should be sent to jail?—Philadelphia Press.

All In. "How did you feel when you found yourself overboard?" "As if I were all in," gasped the resuscitated joker, gurgling merrily.—Philadelphia Ledger.

IN some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for tired and weak digestions.

MOVING IN PORTUGAL.

It Takes About Fifteen Women and Five Men For One Job. Moving day in Portugal is a greater time of trouble than it is even in this country. A traveler tells about it: "Vans are unknown, the only means of wheeled transport being rough carts drawn by bullocks, these in turn proving so ruinous to furniture that only kitchen utensils, iron stoves, bedsteads and other unportable articles are sent by them. For the rest, the goods are carried often for many miles by women, only the heaviest things being taken by men, of whom four are employed to take pianos, wardrobes and other heavy furniture. They carry these on poles laid across their shoulders, to which they are tied by scarves passing under the opposite arm. All lighter goods are taken by the women on their heads. Six dining room chairs form an ordinary load for one woman. "She carries these by placing one on her head, to which chair the remaining five are tied, forming a sort of cage around her. Previous to starting the woman gives herself a shake, the chairs vibrate around her, and, with her hands on her hips, she starts off at a contented jog trot, covering six miles perhaps in an hour and a half and considering herself fairly and sufficiently well paid with 12 cents or 16 cents for the return journey there and back again for a fresh load. For such distances only two journeys are made in the day. "The women are nearly always barefooted, except on the coldest days in winter, when they may perhaps wear sabots, but they often wear as many as fourteen or fifteen much gathered felt coats of all colors and materials tied with a sash round the waist, the bunch thus formed upon the hips making a rest for the hands. All the china and glass are carried in big round baskets on the head and very rarely supported by the hand. About fifteen or sixteen women are generally employed in an ordinary move and four or five men"—Chicago News.

The Whale's Mouth. The whale's mouth is the largest institution of the kind in the animal kingdom, being capable of containing over two hogheads of water. The whale's throat, however, is so small that an orange would scarcely pass through it, and he lives on the minuscule animals contained in the water. Drawing in a large quantity of water, it through his whalebone sieve, retaining the animal organisms it contains, and throwing out the water through circular holes in his head. Whales engaged in feeding are said by whalers to be "spouting."

Reason Enough. Benevolent Old Gentleman (recounting one small boy from the pummeling of two others)—What are you hurting this boy for? "Because he made so many mistakes in his arithmetic this morning." "But what business was that of yours?" "Why, he let us copy our answers from his."

A Strike. Mrs. Nulywood—You don't love me any more—I know you don't, Nulywood—But, dear, you're mistaken—I adore you. Mrs. Nulywood—No; you don't. No man could love a woman so badly dressed as I am!—Paris Rive.

Calmness under contradiction is demonstrative of great stupidity or strong intellect.—Zimmerman.

As a dressing for sores, bruises and burns, Chamberlain's Salve is all that can be desired. It is soothing and healing in its effect. Price 25 cents. For sale by Chas. Strang.

How Their Friendship Ceased to Exist

"Do you say, Ethel, that Charley Nancey is regarded as a bright young man?" "Indeed, he is. There's no brighter man in the whole set." "Well, if you want my honest opinion, he's an unsatisfactory compromise between a fool and an idiot. Don't you dare repeat a word of it, but he came up to the house the other evening to propose to me." "Did he think better of it?" "No, he didn't think better of it, smarty. He actually did propose and did it very nicely too."

"Of course you were in a position to compare him with several others in the same role." "Just one more spiteful interruption, Ethel, and I won't tell you a word more. Honestly, I wanted to accept him, but it would not do to throw myself right at his head, so I reeled off the familiar talk about his being so sudden and left a good opening for him to try again. Not him, the dummy! He just took his gloves, told me as he walked to the hatrack that if a proposal was so sudden after he had been paying me devoted attention for a year, life was too short for him to pursue the matter further, and he was gone."

"My own opinion is that he served you right." "And my opinion is that you're jealous." "And my further opinion is that when he makes his next proposal it will be to me." Then there was a crackling frost in the air, and the two fair maids moved rapidly in opposite directions.—Detroit Free Press.

All Gone Wrong. "This must be good weather for farming?" he queried, as he sat down beside a farmer looking man in the smoking car. "It couldn't be wuss," was the reply. "How's wheat looking?" "Won't be half a crop." "But the hay will be all right?" "Wuss'n the wheat." "Don't you think fruit will turn out well?" "Won't be two apples to a tree, sir." "But there can't be anything wrong with the potatoes?" "I don't expect to see three to a hill."

"Then you think everything is all wrong, do you?" persisted the questioner. "I do, sir. And I told the widdler Jennings when she showed me over just how it would be. Jest throwed me over, sir, and now if the whole caboodle of us go to the poorhouse next winter don't blame me. I asked her six times over to marry me, and she wouldn't do it, and now let the old country go to pot!"

Not Exclusive Either. His Fiance—Clarence has such an affectionate, magnetic way of kissing. Her Dearest Friend—So several of the girls have been telling me.—Philadelphia Press.

An Easy One. Mrs. Graves—He is so cold! It is dreadful! I sit all the evening playing upon the piano, and he sits in his chair and never utters a word the entire evening. Mrs. Wyse—Sits and hears you play all the evening? Why, you silly woman, it is evident he loves you to distraction.—Boston Transcript.

Exchange of Compliments. Man on Bridge—Time can't be very valuable with you, my friend. I've been watching you for two hours, and you haven't had a bite. Man on Bank—My time's worth too much, by gum, to waste two hours of it watching a man fish that ain't ketchin' nothin'!—New York Weekly.

As He Loved Himself. "This doctrine of 'Love thy neighbor as thyself' may be all right in theory," said the egoist, "but I don't think it would work." "No, it wouldn't do for you to go in for it," replied the man who knew him. "You have to be entirely too demonstrative."—Detroit Free Press.

A Sad Maiden's Plight. There came to the beach a poor exile of summer: The due on her thin robes was heavy and more; For distraction she sighed when at twilight repairing To wander alone on the wave beaten shore. "Sad is my fate," cried the heartbroken maiden. The wild deer and wolf from the hunter may flee; Here wait I, a tame deer, with no thought of fleeing. Yet never a fellow comes hunting for me! —Ballmore American.

Egg and Bottle. Take a boiled egg, remove the shell, have a bottle with a large neck, add a piece of paper to the neck and light it. When in blaze put the egg on it, point down, and the heat will pull the egg with great force inside. Now put again a blazed paper in the bottle and manage to have the egg in the neck point up, and the heat will push out the egg with an explosion.
