HUGO'S SHORT MEMORY.

Told Different Versions of a Story on Three Occasions.

The Revue Hebdomadaire publishes an anecdote on Victor Hugo which many will be considered very characteristic. Right after Napoleon III's coup d'etat Victor Hugo and Schoelcher, a well known politician of that period, fled together from Paris. A short time afterward, when Hugo met Schoelcher at his table in Brussels, the poet said: "Yes, my dear friend, you can boast of having once scared me very much. I had no doubt but that we were done for." Turning to the other guests, he explained:

"We were on the way to the Northern railroad depot and were sitting silent and uneasy in the omnibus, our hats drawn deep over our foreheads. Presently a regiment of infantry passed by with flying colors and resounding music. At the sight Schoelcher forgot all caution and, leaning out of the window, shouted, 'Down with Caesar!' Instantly I caught hold of him and closed his mouth with my hand. One word more and we should have been done for."

Two years later Schoelcher visited his friend Hugo in Guernsey. At dinner again the coup d'etat was discussed, and the poet called forth recollections of times past. "Do you still recollect, Schoelcher," he asked, "the day of our flight? We really came off very lucky. But didn't we act like mad men, shouting 'Down with Caesar!' when that regiment was passing by? Of course we were too indignant to be able to keep our temper."

Several years elapsed, and again Schoelcher was a guest in Hugo's house. Conversation turned to civil courage and the like. "Well, my dear Schoelcher," Hugo said to his friend, "I must tell you something I have had in my heart for years. In a critical moment of your life you showed a weakness which grieved me deeply. You will recollect that day when we, after the coup d'etat, left Paris and how I, while a regiment of infantry was passing by, at the sight of these killers of our liberty and in a rage, having no command over myself, shouted out, 'Down with Caesar!' I still have you before my eyes trembling with fear, catching hold of me by the lapel of my coat and forcing the down on the seat, so concerned you were for your freedom life."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

When fish bite freely they're little ones.

The impudence of some people is the only rare thing about them.

To turn a letter may show a lack of sentiment, but it is in many cases a mark of good judgment.

You often hear a mother say to her child, "How often must I tell you? How often must you be told?"

There is one thing you should put off all remembrance that you might do today, and that is sitting down and counting your troubles.

Some men not only feel that the world owes them a living, but are sore because there are no collection agencies to collect it for them.

If you brag that you are contented people say you might as well be a cow, and if you are discontented people say you have a grudge, and there you are.—Arlington Globe.

Animals at Play.

Animals have a keen sense of "making believe" which is the essence of play. A child's first game is bopeep—make believe. When a couple of dogs have a jolly tussle they make believe to engage in deadly combat. A striking instance of this occurred to a writer some years back. He gave a dead mouse to a kitten. It was the first time she had seen one, and she sniffed at it inquisitively before deciding to toss it about. A pair of clippers lay on the floor. She dropped the mouse into one of them and immediately proceeded to look for it most anxiously in the other slipper till I took up the first, which contained her booty. Then she showed that it was no real lack of memory that had sent her on the boot-les search.

The West End.

Why is it that in most of the cities of the world fashion makes its home in the northwestern quarter? Why is it that the "west end" is so often the aristocratic section of the city and the "east side" and "south side" so often the residence of the poorer classes? It is a fact, and there is a ruling cause for it. It is this—that the prevailing winds of the earth are northwesterly. They are in general northwesterly, and their tendency is to blow the dust, smoke and odors of a city to its eastern or southern side. This makes the opposite quarter the more desirable for residence.

Rough on the Kirk Rats.

It was a young Scott's first sermon after he received his license, and unfortunately he became very nervous, lost control of his voice and spoke very loudly indeed. Nearly all his friends went to hear him preach, but one who was unable to bear him inquired at the first opportunity as to how he got on. "I'll tell you one thing," was the candid reply, "it's many a day since the rats in Boulton Kirk got such a fright!"—Dundee Advertiser.

The Ruler.

"Now that you've gone to house-keeping, which rules, you or your wife?"

"Neither of us. We have a provisional government."

"What is that?"

"The cook's!"—Baltimore American.

A STITCH IN TIME.

Hot Springs, Ark., writes: "I keep a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup in my medicine chest, and thank my forethought many times. It has prevented many severe spells of sickness." Chas. Strang, Medford, Oregon, Central Point Pharmacy.

ANGER IS DANGEROUS

Death Liable to Follow a Sudden Outburst of Temper.

FRENZY MAY SPELL SUICIDE

A Chemical Poison is Created in the System When One Indulges in a Fit of Rage—Famous Men Who Have Died in a Moment of Passion.

Death frequently follows a sudden fit of anger. Persons who are otherwise sensible and even philosophical indulge at times in this suicidal and profitless pastime. The Emperor Nero died at the age of sixty-six from fever resulting from a fit of anger. Paul III, who occupied the papal throne from 1550 to 1559 and who was considered one of the most intelligent and liberal as well as just of popes, died from a sudden fit of anger while upbraiding Cardinal Alessandro Farnese, who had proved false to his friends and benefactors.

The emperor of Valentianum while addressing a deputation of backsliding Germans allowed his angry emotions to get the upper hand of his common sense and fell dead ere he had finished speaking. The celebrated English surgeon John Hunter indulged in angry dispute with one of his colleagues at St. George's hospital and dropped dead at the feet of him who had been the cause of the resentful and bitter remarks. The Russian surgeon Budda-woski, being angered at the awkwardness of an assistant during a surgical operation, gave free vent to a fit of anger and expired without a moment's warning.

The milk as well as the flesh of animals that have died while in a rage has been found upon analysis to contain elements of poison, and many an innocent babe has been made dangerously ill by nursing at the mother's breast immediately after that mother had indulged in a fit of frenzy or anger. Neither the chemist nor bacteriologist has yet been able to demonstrate the particular poison or germ that renders the milk toxic under the conditions, but that a poison and a very active and energetic one exists is unquestionable.

Death during a fit of anger may be produced by a toxic product developed by the undue excitement as much as to the play of the emotions upon the nerve centers of the heart. Little children should be taught in earliest infancy to control their angry passions. A parent smiling approvingly at what he is pleased to term the "spunkiness" of his offspring without making any effort to reprove or to correct the outburst of ill temper is guilty of wanton neglect and is storing up much unpleasantness for both himself and the child in future.

"Anger is a stone cast into a wasp's nest," reads the Malabar proverb, and how often the angry word stirs up strife and discord and contentions that keep up a continual unpleasant buzz until, like wasps disturbed in their nests, they alight upon the disturber, bringing a sting that wounds his own personality.

"Be slow to wrath" might be a cherished guide to any and every period of life. But as years run their course, particularly if accompanied by a feeble condition of body, a conscious tendency to fits of anger should induce habits of strenuous self control. This control, however, is not acquired in a day. The imprisoned fire of anger but waits for the kindling breath of provocation, and each time it is confronted by the latter a calm exterior, even though the spirit be at white heat, will win a victory without either party to the strife being a loser.

A bright three-year-old child who was given to passionate outbursts of resentful anger each time her wishes were thwarted was one morning suddenly lifted to the mirror with the mother's admonition, "Look at yourself!" Immediately the child's resentful face changed, and, nodding to her mother, who wisely refrained from saying another word regarding the ebullition of temper, she, with an apologetic hug, softly sobbed away the resentment.

Some weeks afterward, during which time there was a marked change for the better in the temperament of the child, the mother had occasion to reprove the little one for an act of disobedience, using perhaps unnecessary warmth of temper at the time. Without hesitation the little one seized her by the hand and took her to the mirror. "Look at yourself!" she exclaimed, her childish voice as severe as her strength permitted, at the same time struggling desperately to keep the angry lines from her own tiny face by puckering her lips into a form from which issued a succession of soft, nonchalant oos.

The lesson had been taught, learned and retained, and who shall say how far reaching its influence? If one can only be brought to understand the toxic effect of anger upon the whole sensorial system of the individual, resulting, as it frequently does, in sickness and even death, each would be more at peace with his neighbor, with the community and with the world at large.—Marion Ainsworth White in Chicago Tribune.

Not Her Sort.

Gabriel was blowing the last trumpet. "Hurry up!" shouted Mr. De Style. "I won't!" retorted Mrs. De Style. "Think I'm going in with the crush?"—Washington Herald.

Behavior is a mirror in which every one displays his image.—Goethe.

Irrefragable Americanisms.

One of the most irritating of Americanisms is the use of "limb" for "branch." "Limb" for "leg" has always been accepted as an Americanism, but what is the matter with "branch"? Careful Anglophile writers are beginning now to reintroduce this latter word, but "limb" has hitherto been the transatlantic word with all authors. If it is also old English we shall not mind so much, but is it? The joke of the verse is at least 1,200 years old, but how old is the English version?—London Chronicle.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00.

Profligate Spendthrifts.
The wealth of many of the ancient Romans was reckoned far into the millions. Mark Antony during his somewhat checkered career squandered no less than $735,000,000, and Tiberius left at his death over eighteen millions, which Caligula spent in less than a year. Records show that this spendthrift paid $150,000 for one supper. Horace tells us that Pegasus, a singer, could in five days spend $40,000, and Claudius on a small wager swallowed a pearl worth nearly $400,000. The estate of Crassus was valued at $8,000,000. Lucullus dined at the rate of $5,000 a meal for several weeks. Lentulus was worth not less than sixteen millions, and Apicius squandered nearly five millions of dollars in a few weeks.
