ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Two of the Japanese boys in this city had an exciting experience Sunday and as a consequence are nursing some severe bruises and waiting for some broken bones to heal. They were tempted by the beautiful weather and thought to take a drive. The team, being strictly American and from the "sagebrush" beside took matters in their own hands—cr feet—and ran away demolishing the rig, and damaging the subjects of the Mikado to a considerable extent. One sustained a broken arm and the other was also bruised extensively.

The Southern Oregon Laundry Co. is doing business in the same old way—with satisfaction to all patrons. The laundry is the best equipped in Southern Oregon, the laundrymen are experienced and every care is taken to do good and prompt work. The wagon will call at your home or place of business, or you can leave orders at the candy store in the Moore Building, West Seventh Street.

"The Royal Slave" at the Medford Opera House last Friday was attended by a small and rather lukewarm audience. The play with suitable stage accessories would be an impressive and intensely interesting one, and even with the handicap of crowded quarters and inadequate light effects, the company made a very fair presentation. If the young man who plays the American reporter would moderate his voice somewhat—and tone himself down generally, the effect would be much for the better.

The grandmothers of the old Dutch Dunkard families of Western Pennsylvania have made and used "Hickory Bark Cough Remedy" and reared their families on it for a hundred years. Now you can buy it from your dealers. Ask for it, and use it, because it is pure; because it will stop your cough; because it is the best cough remedy made today. For sale by Haskin's Drug Store and all dealers everywhere.

The three exhibitions, with matinees, of the moving pictures of the "Passion Play" at the opera house, attracted good-sized audiences on each occasion, and the show was well worthy of patronage. The pictures were life like and distinct and depict the life of Christ, from infancy to the "crucifixion" as it is depicted in the play at the village of Oberammergau, where the play is produced by the peasants, who are trained for the several characters throughout their lifetime.

From Pennsylvania comes the report that a man died from eating fifteen moth balls. He took them for candy. We don't believe it. As well say a man could take fifteen drinks of whiskey, under the impression that he was drinking water all the time.

HIS NICE, QUIET FOURTH
A Woodland Idol Told in Allegorical Language.

Now, it was the custom in those parts to gather themselves together on the fourth day of the seventh month and to make much noise and go on a picnic and have a high old time. Accordingly James Dunstan Dasher arose about the first watch of the morning and went into an inner court of his house, where slept his sons and his daughters and his bird dog. And when he found them snoring he cried out in a low voice:
"Arise, you young coxotes! This is the Fourth and man must needs get up early and chide himself, lest the night come and find him sober and un-mutilated."
So they all got busy. And James and his sons straightway yoked up his mules and attached them to the spring-wagon. And they all got in and went a long journey into a far country, where there was a lake no larger than a man's hand. And with them also was a small keg which contained neither molasses nor nuts. And there were also many other people gathered together at the lake, and to each other they murmured, "Isn't this lovely?"
Then did James go forth with a friend and stay birds. And they dragged a ten pound shoveler over a plowed field about twelve miles, and they said they were glad they didn't have to work that day. And after they had crippled two Jack rabbits they returned and set upon the ground and ate very justly, partaking without fear or favor of chicken, chowder, tarantulas and term firm.

And, lo, about this time the keg began to get busy. And James Dunstan Dasher began to dance before the people, and he spoke many strange words, the like of which had never been heard before; and, lo, a red faced man with a wart on his nose awoke and remarked that James was not pleasing unto him. And James and he straightway rushed together with much enthusiasm. And it came to pass that James presently looked like a bale of loose hay, and he said he had enough. And every one believed him. Then he slept, and when he awoke he found that his mules had wandered off about three days' journey. Then he gathered his family together, and they hooted it to town. And he and his family brought back all but three of the red bags in those woods, and those three were young and would not leave their mother. And the following day his neighbors questioned him how he had spent the Fourth. And he answered:
"Oh, we had a nice, quiet day in the woods. You ought to have went."—Judge.

The Stone of Higgins.
Many people who sign themselves Higgins have sought to prove that their surname is derived from the name borne by St. Hyginus, tracing it through the old English form "St. Yegra." But according to an authority "The" short for Isaac, or rather with "Higgins" the form in which "The" appeared in Langland's time. Isaac, Isaacson, Hicks, Higgins, Hixson and Higgins would come by different versions of the same name, while Higgins is merely modified by the addition of the Anglo-Norman diminutive. Another school derives Higgins, Hitchinson and Higgins alike from Hugh, or more exactly, from Hugonis, the genitive of the Latin Hugio.

The Shorn.
A friend of Maurice Barrymore related an incident of his last meeting with the brilliant actor, which occurred only a short time before his faculties began to fail. As they were perusing the newspaper man asked the other "Where are you to be found nowadays at the Players?" "No," replied Barrymore; "I'm posted at the Players, but you can always find me at the Lamb. As a matter of fact," he added whimsically, "I'm posted at the Lamb, too, but they temper the wind there."

The Jury in the case of the state vs. Frank Corpron charged with complicity in the murder of James M. Johnson in a saloon at Klamath Falls on Christmas eve, after being out less than an hour Thursday evening brought in a verdict of not guilty. The jury was composed of John H. Hamilton, K. M. C. Brown, Elmer Moore, Jas. Logue, Chas. Steamer, Ivan Daniels, E. W. Shortt, B. E. Hawkins, E. S. Terwilliger, Jos. Stukel, Geo. Klefer and Robt. Anderson. Peter Peterstainer was charged with complicity in Johnson's death also and his trial will begin in the Klamath county circuit court tomorrow. The death of Johnson was the result of a saloon brawl on the night in question, in which the prosecution set up the theory that Johnson was struck in the head and killed by the defendants with a billiard cue, the defense maintaining that in the melee Johnson fell upon the cue and that his death was therefore accidental.

O. O. Heiman, E. J. Farlow and Fred R. Neil returned today from Salem where they attended a shooting tournament and tried conclusions with a big bunch of Willamette shot gun artists. Heiman carried off the honors of the shoot with the highest average score, and Neil also came home with some of the other fellows' entrance fees.

Suggestions For Fireworks.
No matter how warm and wearied a man may be a firecracker dropped down his shirt collar will stimulate him.
One of the latest quips is to paint a small bomb in imitation of a golf ball and let a friend take a whack at it.
One of the most profane places for a firecracker is a stiffy hat, or better still, the back hair.
One of the capital diversions of an evening entertainment is to fasten a pinwheel to a lace curtain, touch a match to the fuse and see what the fremen do.
Some may prefer a plate glass window for a skyrocket target, but the best authorities agree that it is seen at its best in a crowded dining room.—New York Herald.

A Patriot's Prophecy.
But whatever may be our fate, be assured that this Declaration will stand. It may cost treasure, and it may cost blood, but it will stand. And it will richly compensate for both. Through the thick gloom of the present I see the brightness of the future as the sun in heaven. We shall make this a glorious, an immortal day. When we are in our graves our children will honor it. They will celebrate it with thanksgiving, with feecivity, with bonfires and illuminations. On its annual return they will shed tears—copious, gushing tears—not of subjection and slavery, not of agony and distress, but of exultation, of gratitude and of joy.—John Adams Before the Continental Congress.

FORGOT HIS POCKETBOOK.
A Bridal Couple Call on Their Friends to Supply the Price.
Santa Cruz, Jan. 28.—When a man marries for the third time he is supposed to be proof against the nervousness which young married couples usually show about train time. This was not the case, however, with William Gregory, the well-known shoemaker of this town who was married to Mrs. Celeste Baird, also of this city.
When the bridal couple, accompanied by a number of friends arrived at the Southern Pacific depot to take the train for San Francisco, Mr. Gregory found that he had left his pocketbook behind containing the money he had put aside for the wedding journey. It was too late to go back to his home so there was nothing to do but take up a collection.

One lady put in $5, another $10, and each member of the party gave what they had with them to enable Mr. and Mrs. Gregory to purchase a ticket and have enough to pay for their bed and board while in the city. So the tickets were bought and the trunks checked, and amid showers of rice and peals of laughter Mr. and Mrs. Gregory started for San Francisco on their honeymoon.

Notice to the Public
Pursuant to the solicitation of a large number of Republicans of Jackson and Josephine counties I have decided to become a candidate for the office of District Attorney for the First Precincting District of Oregon, subject to the action of the republican voters at the coming primary election.

My petition as such nominee will in due time be filed with the Secretary of State and along with it a brief statement of principals which will be made public.
Very respectfully,
B. F. Mulkey,
Jacksonville, Oregon,
