A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING

Hush, little barroom, don't you cry, We'll be a city, by and by.
Hush, little knocker, don't you cry, Twenty-five thousand, by and by.

It would have looked queer if Jackson county had not stood in with her sister counties up the line in Western Oregon.

Well, let's get after that water committee and rush that water along from Wasson canyon. Election is over and the dries have it.

Now let every one forget their little political differences and all get in behind and boost. Jackson county is the best place on earth, after all.

The election being now over, we can begin turning our attention to building up the county, inducing emigration and other little things like that.

The postmist has his uses—not many, but some. By continually harping about the "hole in the doughnut," he makes the optimist mad and he builds his part that much much better.

Neurosympathic citizens are abundant and their neurosthenia has a tendency to increase as the election returns are coming in. Local medical science applies to it the term of Juneoerusthenia. But what is the matter with the Rogue river apples?

It might be well at this time for the people of this locality to look out for their sewerage service and prevent any disease which the summer months is apt to bring on. While Medford is always in a healthful state it can only be maintained by a careful attention to sanitary conditions.

Burglars entered the furniture store of Campbell & Tellman at Eugene and appropriated two cents. They will probably buy Standard Oil stock with their ill-gotten gains.

Now it is up to the calamity-howlers to make good their forecasts that Jackson county will go bankrupt under a dry regime. But somehow the fruit trees look as good as ever this morning.

A private mark is to be allowed on stamps used by large houses to keep the office boy from stealing them. It may overawe the boy, but we shall see if it prevents the beautiful girl stenographer from using them corresponding with the loveliest young man on earth.—Ex.

One of the most appreciative things ever said of the stability of the ships of the American navy was the answer made by Admiral Evans to congratulations on his successful handling of the fleet on the trip around "the Horn." "Oh, I didn't do much," said Evans, "they just took themselves around." Those people who predicted all sorts of disaster haven't been heard from since.

"You made a mistake in your paper," said an indignant man, entering the editorial sanctum of a daily journal. "I was one of the competitors at an athletic entertainment last night and you referred to me as 'the well-known lightweight champion.'" "Well, are you not?" inquired the sporting editor. "No; I'm nothing of the kind," was the angry response, "and it's confoundedly awkward, because I'm a coal dealer."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Brooklyn Times says: "The professional baseball team of Houston, Tex., has adopted a baby. The team was traveling when a young mother asked one of the pitchers to hold the child for a few moments. She went into the next car, and at the next station she got off the train and disappeared. The teammates then determined to keep and rear the child and use it as a mascot. It is said that the Houston team has been playing winning ball ever since its new mascot arrived." When this item makes the entire rounds of the press every losing ball team will be sterilized.

Sterilized apple juice is a popular non-alcoholic beverage in many parts of Germany and France, and large quantities of apples are imported from the United States by persons engaged in its manufacture in the countries mentioned. Recently there has been some complaint about the quality of the fruit, which, it is claimed, lacks uniformity, and it is suggested that "if a company were formed in the United States which would buy and furnish the supply of dried apples of the desired quality and uniformity to European manufacturers," we should increase our sales of the fruit. Why not form a company in Medford to carry the suggestion a step further; that is to say, have it select the good fruit of this valley and convert it into sterilized apple juice and ship it to Europe? A great saving would be effected by resorting to such a course, and another industry added to those in and near this city.

For a Sprained Ankle.

As usually treated, a sprained ankle will disable the injured person for a month or more, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment and observing the directions with each bottle faithfully, a cure may be effected in many cases in less than one week's time. This liniment is a most remarkable preparation. Try it for a sprain or bruise, or when laid up with chronic or muscular rheumatism, and you are certain to be delighted with the prompt relief which it affords. For sale by Chas. Strang.

WILL BENEFIT COUNTIES

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The fact that Western states are hereafter to receive 25 per cent of the receipts of forest reserves, in lieu of 10 per cent which they have received during the past two years, is due very largely to the work of Senator Fulton and Representative Hawley of Oregon. It was Mr. Fulton who proposed the amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill in the Senate, and it was Mr. Hawley who persuaded the house conferees to accept the amendment, after they had held out long and announced that they would not stand for the increase. Behind this legislation is an interesting story.

The original proposition to give the states a share of the receipts from forest reserves—that is, a part of the money received from sales of timber, grazing privileges, etc., was first advanced by Mr. Fulton two years ago. He contended that the reservation of land decreased the taxable area of those counties in which reserves were located, and correspondingly made the burden the heavier on property-holders. He said the counties should be compensated for the money they would ultimately receive in taxes, should the reserved land pass to private ownership, and he contended for 25 per cent of the receipts, the money to be paid by the federal government to the states, and by the states prorated to the various counties affected, to be used for school purposes and for the building of roads. At that time, however, congress would not consent to give the states 25 per cent, and reduced the amount to 10 per cent.

For the past two years the states have received this 10 per cent, and it has been found that the amount, in most instances, is too small to accomplish much in the way of maintaining schools or building roads. For that reason Mr. Fulton this year proposed to increase the amount to 25 per cent, and after a spirited fight led by Senator Heyburn of Idaho his amendment was adopted in the senate. In fighting the amendment, Mr. Heyburn said that his state could not use any of this money for road construction, but investigation developed the fact that the state had done so just as other states had done, and Mr. Heyburn's objection was overruled. It did not develop until later why Mr. Heyburn opposed the amendment.

Ever since he entered the senate Mr. Heyburn has been fighting the forestry policy and the forest service. When the proposition was made to give the states 25 per cent of the receipts from reserves—a proposition, by the way, that was endorsed by the forest service, Mr. Heyburn realized that this increase would tend to soften the hearts of many persons who had been criticizing the service, particularly those who condemned the reserves because they reduced the taxable area in new states. In other words, he saw the props being knocked from under one of his leading arguments. He did not want to lose this point, so he fought to hold down the donation to the states, though on the floor of the senate he did not state the true ground for his opposition.

When the agricultural bill, carrying the Fulton 25 per cent amendment, went to conference, the house conferees stood out against the increase, taking the position that the states were not entitled to so great a share of the receipts. The senate conferees worked for several days, but were unable to budge the house, and had about given up the fight when Mr. Hawley, a member of the agriculture committee, appeared on the scene. He explained to the house conferees that the increase was absolutely just and proper and should be granted, and he set forth the reasons. When he concluded his statement, the chairman of the house conferees said:

"Well, Mr. Hawley, if you will vouch for the amendment I am willing to accept your judgment against my own, and will no longer oppose the increase."

The other conferees on the part of the house, who had served on committee with Mr. Hawley, expressed similar views and in that way the increase was accepted.

The forest service, though it did not recommend the increase, carried by the Fulton amendment, was heartily in favor of its adoption. While the forest service is making every effort to place the forest reserves on a self-sustaining basis, it believes it good policy to divert one-quarter of its receipts to the respective states realizing that this step would largely tend to allay opposition which still prevails in certain parts of the West. The time is coming, and coming soon, when receipts from reserves will meet all the expense of administration and protection and as the receipts increase, the benefits to the states will grow correspondingly. It is predicted that inside of five years—possibly in two or three—the forest service will not be compelled to go to congress for appropriations; the receipts from the reserves will defray all expenses, and in the act distant future will turn a handsome surplus into the federal treasury, unless congress makes some other disposition of the receipts above cost.

MUST HAVE BEEN HUNGRY.

The residence of Benj. M. Collins, on B street was entered on Sunday evening by some unknown person, who ransacked the place, but failed to take anything but a quantity of food which was cooked and on the dining-room table. Other things may have been taken, but nothing so far has been missed.

In gaining entrance the burglar slit the screen door at the rear of the residence, but found that the inside door was locked. He then went around to the front of the residence and entered by the front door, which was unlocked.

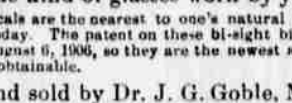

That he was a tramp is shown by the fact that he took food from the table in the dining-room and nothing else. Mr. Collins has a number of pieces of valuable silverware in his house, but evidently the intruder overlooked these, for he did not care to take anything which he might have trouble of disposing of.

Mr. Collins and family had been away all of the day on Sunday and upon his return home did not notice anything out of the way. Yesterday morning he noticed that a slit had been cut in the screen door at the rear of the house. Mr. Collins immediately began an investigation and found that the house had indeed been ransacked, but that there was nothing missing but a quantity of food which Mrs. Collins had remarked the evening before was missing.

There is absolutely no clue as to who the marauder was. The police are watching all questionable characters in the city.

The old style of DOUBLE SIGHT glasses do not look as well, and there is always a dirty line separating the far sight from the near. The BI-SIGHT BIFOCAL is ground from ONE piece of glass. The difference between the two is illustrated in the cut below. There is no piece simply cemented on to the main glass to work loose in a few months, and when you wipe them they are clean, and no one knows that you are old enough to be compelled to wear double-sight glasses, because they cannot tell them from the kind of glasses worn by young people.

Bi-sight Bifocals are the nearest to one's natural sight of any glass made today. The patent on these bi-sight bifocal glasses was issued August 6, 1906, so they are the newest and most up-to-date glass obtainable.

Fitted and sold by Dr. J. G. Goble, Medford.

The new style. There is no dividing line. The old style bifocal. Notice dividing line.
