A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING

And still the sound of the hammer and the saw is sweet music in our ears.
With cyclones and spring floods, the Middle West is certainly between the devil and the deep sea.
Some are talking pessimistically of the future, but the building operations continue right along.
The road scraper is not so pretentious as the skyscraper, yet it occupies a very useful and honorable position in the economy of civilization.
Glittering commercial reports from all parts of the country indicate that there will be precious little need for the emergency currency to emerge.
Said the little red hen
To the big brown rooster,
"You hadn't ought to live
If you can't be a booster."

Forest Service Hard at Work.

No department of government activity in the West has developed faster and attained a greater degree of general usefulness, considering the number of men engaged therein, than has the forestry service. From a handful of scattered and untrained rangers, perfunctorily patrolling wide stretches of forest, it has grown to a business-like, well-directed and well-administered arm of the government in its effort to preserve the forests of the country for future generations. Still the service is hampered by lack of men. In the vast area reaching from Buck Lake on the south to the Umpqua divide on the north—and in some places over 40 miles in width, many of those miles being on edge, there are but 11 men, including the office force at the headquarters in Medford. The office force of the forest service, however, is different from the ordinary office force, inasmuch as every one is capable of taking the field at any time and rendering a good account of himself.
In the headquarters office at Medford everything is carried on in the most approved business style. There are filing cabinets for every kind of report, application, complaint or claim that comes to the office, and he it known the number is not small. The storeroom contains supplies of all kinds for the men in the field, for Uncle Sam now furnishes to his "handy men" everything he thinks they need, and a whole lot of things the first rangers wouldn't have known what to do with. There are tents and axes and surveying instruments and canteens—not "army canteens"—books galore and a whole lot of other paraphernalia.
Last year in the Cascade Mazama, as it is now officially designated, there were over 40 miles of train constructed—one leading from the east end of Four-Mile Lake to the Red Blanket ranch near Prospect is 23 miles in length and for a great part of the way is almost a wagon road. The other leads from Fish Lake to Little Elk prairie and is eight miles long. Besides ranger cabins have been constructed at Big Elk and Seven-Mile and one at Brown's cabins, on the Upper Rogue river, will be finished this season. A commodious pasture for the accommodation of the rangers and also of the traveling public has been inclosed at Lake of the Woods.
In the meantime, while the boys were resting, so to speak, they have run several hundred miles of boundary lines, marked the same, estimated a large amount of timber, looked after grazing permits, watched trespassers and did other small stunts. The average forest ranger nowadays has an easy time—well, hardly.
In the local headquarters, C. J. Buck is acting supervisor, with S. S. Swenning as assistant in the absence of the chief; H. D. Foster, forest assistant; J. E. Gribble, forest guard, and Forest G. Whitney, forestry clerk, take care of the business. They are not all in at the same time, but there is always somebody there to take care of inquiries.
The forest service has been of considerable benefit to the school fund of Jackson county during the past two years, under the provision allowing 10 per cent of the gross receipts of the reserve lands within the county to be turned over to the school fund. Each of the past two years $800 has been received by the county from this source, and this year the percentage has been raised to 25 per cent, which will make the quota for this county at least $2000. It will very likely be much more this year and in the years hereafter, as there will be much more timber sold from reserve lands than formerly. One item of note is the payment of $250 for timber used in their operations inside the reserve. This means $250 for Jackson county.

Forest G. Whitney, forest service clerk, lately of Seattle, has been assigned to duty at the forestry headquarters in Medford and assumed his duties Wednesday of this week.

Harry Richardson, clerk of school district 16 (Agate district) reports that H. C. Messenger, the successful bidder for the construction of their new schoolhouse, is getting busy on the construction work. His bid was $2150. The building will be 50x75 feet in size, will have a concrete foundation, two school rooms and is to be completed by September 1. The directors will sell the old school house.

He has been in Medford for a couple of years, and like a few of the many young men who come west, he has acquired a hankering for the old haunts. About the time one of those rip-snoorting nor'westers swoops down on him next January time and the thermometers are falling through themselves to register the tempera-

Received Much Fencing.
Gaddis & Dixon, the Page fence men of Southern Oregon and Northern California, have just received another carload of Page fence direct from the factory. This carload was the largest car of fence ever shipped to this country and contained almost 18 miles of fence, a great portion of which was the famous standard farm styles, five feet high.
This carload also made the quickest time of any carload shipment ever received at this station from the East, making the distance from the factory at Monessen, Pa., to Medford in just 15 days, beating all previous records by five days. This car was routed by the Harriman lines and its connections and the shippers were kept in constant touch with its movements.
Gaddis & Dixon have received over 200,000 pounds of Page fence here at Medford during the last few months, making a total of 23,680 rods, or 74 miles, within this short time, making the enormous total sum of over 600 miles, or over 192,000 rods of Page fence that has been shipped into Southern Oregon during the last few years, and the summer business will be far better than in previous years on account of more improvements in the valley and county.

Resumption of Work at Mine.
(From Sunday's Daily.)
There is a great stir in evidence at the coal mine on the east side of the valley that was recently purchased by the Pacific Coal company. Fresh supplies are being shipped out in great quantities and all indications tend toward a resumption of the work on a large scale. Manager Doan is at present down on the Meadows property, north of this city, looking after the sinking of a few prospect shafts.
The steam pump in the coal mine has been moved to the old shaft, which was sunk some time ago by the Southern Pacific Railroad company, and the work of pumping out that shaft has been undertaken. The work is in charge of Engineer Baxter, a mining engineer from Pasadena.
It is reported that a week from tomorrow a large force of men will be put to work in the old shaft. It is thought that the shaft will show as good a deposit of coal as is shown in the mine proper. There are seven men at work in the mine at the present time.

The old style of DOUBLE SIGHT glasses do not look as well, and there is always a dirty line separating the far sight from the near. The BI-SIGHT BIFOCAL is ground from ONE piece of glass. The difference between the two is illustrated in the cut below. There is no piece simply cemented on to the main glass to work loose in a few months, and when you wipe them they are clean, and no one knows that you are old enough to be compelled to wear double-sight glasses, because they cannot tell them from the kind of glasses worn by young people.
Bi-sight bifocals are the nearest to one's natural sight of any glass made today. The patent on these bi-sight bifocal glasses was issued August 6, 1906, so they are the newest and most up-to-date glass obtainable.
