OUR COUNTY Correspondents

EAGLE POINT EAGLETS.

(By A. C. Howlett.)

Wilford Jack came up from Ashland last week to visit his relatives in these parts.

John Watkins has had the carpenters at work on his house putting on rustic and making additions to the building.

Mrs. Dr. Grover of the unsurveyed stopped here last Monday for dinner on her way to Iowa to join her husband.

There is considerable lumber being hauled here and through town to other parts of the valley and business is looking up.

Chauncey and Jack Florey, sons of our postmaster, started last Saturday to Crater Lake national park to work this summer.

Mesdames Schneider and Messenger of Elk Creek were pleasant callers on Wednesday of last week on their way to Agate and Medford.

Haying is under way and men who have and will have hay to sell are looking around for a market, as the late rain has brought it out so that the crop seems to be up to the average.

Mr. William Brown has the men at work making the foundation of his new residence of concrete and getting the lumber out to build. Dr. Holt is also getting the material out for his house.

Dr. Holt of Eagle Point returned from Portland last week and Miss Lottie Taylor, who has been in Portland for the last two weeks visiting her mother and brothers, returned last Tuesday.

Rev. Mellenry, the anti-saloon campaigner, visited Eagle Point last Tuesday in the interest of the Anti-Saloon league. He is confident that every saloon in the county will be wiped out after the first of July.

Mr. Briggs and Mr. Mahoney of Butte Falls were sojourners among us last Monday night. Mr. B. had been to Medford and secured a load of supplies for his drug store in Butte Falls, and Mr. Mahoney was doing his hauling for him.

Our postmaster has put in a new set of boxes and changed everything around so that the office presents a neat and tidy appearance, instead of having the old style of lock boxes with a key we now have the combination lock without a key.

Mr. Pierce of Siskiyou county, California, was a pleasant caller last week on his way to the Crater Lake Lumber company's mills to look over the situation, roads, etc., with the object in view of taking a contract to haul lumber with a large traction engine from the mills to the railroad.

Deputy Assessor W. R. Stenseli came among us last Sunday evening and has been assessing the property in this precinct. He is aiming to assess the property at its cash value and consequently making us poor fellows feel quite rich, but he assures us that the rate will be made such that our taxes will be no higher than they have been heretofore.

Died—June 14, at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. M. Thomas, in Eagle Point, Mrs. St. Clare, aged about 70 years. The deceased had been living in this county for a number of years and was highly respected by those who knew her. She was a member of the Central Point Christian church where the funeral services were conducted last Monday, and the remains were interred in the Jacksonville cemetery by the side of her husband who preceded her to the beyond several years ago. They never had any children, but she left a sister, Mrs. Thomas, and brother, D. S. J. Pierce of Forest Creek.

Last Sunday being children's day, the Sunday school from the different sections of this end of the county met in a beautiful grove on the north bank of Rogue river, under the direction of Rev. M. C. Davis, the traveling Sunday school missionary of the Congregational church. The exercises were opened with singing and praper and in the forenoon we had the program of Table Rock school. After the exercises were concluded quite a number took boat rides in the river in boats that were there for the occasion. Every one there seemed to enjoy themselves and the first children's day exercises on the Rogue river will be long remembered by those who were present and enjoyed the pleasures of the occasion.

Our annual school meeting was held last Monday and there was a fair attendance. J. W. Grover was elected director and J. A. Jones was elected district clerk. The meeting voted a 5-mill tax to be levied for school purposes for the next year and the valuation that Mr. Stansell, the deputy assessor, is putting on the property here that will raise about half enough to pay off the indebtedness of the district, but as we expect to pay at least $100 a month for the principal and $50 a month for the primary teacher and expect to have an eight months' school the coming school year, it will take some money to foot the bill, and the most of those present at the meeting were in favor of an eight months' school and hiring nothing but No. 1 teachers.

THE ARGUMENTS OF ATTORNEY W. M. COLVIG

"Plaintiff says that he has no plain, speedy or adequate remedy at law for the reason that the laws of this state do not provide any manner for contesting such elections.

"Suppose the ordinary means of contesting elections were open to him, would a re-count of the ballot help solve the question as to whether or not the Medford charter is the later law? The question which he raises is one of law and not of fact. I cannot see why he needs to contest the election nor upon what he would base such contest. If the general law is repealed by the charter he could have reviewed the County court at the time it made the order calling the election, and he can review them after they have made their order, if in the exercise of jurisdiction it exceeds its powers.

"Reverting to a point argued in my former brief as to when the local option law went into effect, I said that it, as enacted by the people, went into effect by proclamation by the governor June 24, 1904, but the only effect it had then was that of an enabling act. Its power and influence over the liquor question in Oregon were prospective and not effective until the people had decided to put it into force. It did not repeal any charter at that time nor never has since, but the people, when by a proper election have taken advantage of its privileges and have decided in favor of prohibition in any locality by such act, have put the law into effect and suspended all charter privileges within the precincts covered by the election

"This view of the law reconciles the two seemingly conflicting statutes and leaves both with power to act in accordance with the will of the people, and whenever they have decided which shall have sway.

"Respectfully,

"WM. M. COLVIG."

All Doubts Dispelled.

(Associated Press Dispatch.)

CHICAGO, Ill., June 17.—The second day of the Republican national convention has brought the long-expected Roosevelt yell, and a whirlwind of enthusiasm which raged within the vast amphitheater of the Coliseum for fully 45 minutes today and for the time presenting to the timid a spectre of a Roosevelt stampede.

Probably the most important act of the day and one having the greatest significance in the final result of the convention was the adoption of the final report of the committee on credentials, seating the Taft delegates practically intoto. If there had been any lingering doubt of the Taft strength it disappeared before this decisive action, which in effect placed more than 700 delegates in the Taft column.

Equally important and even more remarkable was the acceptance of this resolution by the "allies" without even the formality of a dissenting minority report and without carrying the question to the floor of the convention for the open fight which has been so long threatened. Instead all further opposition seemed crumbled and thus the path was cleared for the fulfillment of the plans already matured for the nomination of the head of the ticket. Favorites still have, however, their bands of steadfast supporters who will show their loyalty when the first ballot is taken.

The scene within the Coliseum today repeated that of yesterday in magnitude and brilliancy of its spectacular features. Again every seat was occupied and 14,000 people, packing the floors, aisles, galleries and platform, joined in the ebb and flow of agitation and enthusiasm. Temporary Chairman Burrows called the convention to order at 12:20, but the delays of committees in reporting gave an hour for diversion before the serious work of the day began. This time it was given over to marching of various clubs, bands and vocal choruses. This diversion over, the convention turned to committee reports, the first being credentials, the very foundation on which the delegates have their seats and vote. It was presented by Senator Fulton of Oregon in a three-minute speech, stating that the action on the national committee had been fully justified and upheld. For a moment the delegates looked about for the fire-breathing senator of Indiana who had led the minority for the allies' forces and had promised a lively fight on the floor.

But Bookwalter sat with the Indiana delegation, shaking his head in answer to inquiries and announcing that the fight had been abandoned. The report was quickly approved with only a few scattering votes in opposition.

The presentation of the report on permanent organization was the signal for Burrows to yield to Permanent Chairman Lodge, who spoke with that resonant New England twang, which made it ring to the farthest corners of the hall.

"The fevered fancy of an uneasy decade" was his indictment hurled against the visionary policies of the opposition parties. The applause had hardly died away when Lodge launched his sentence which electrified the assemblage into its first real demonstration of wild enthusiasm.

"The president," exclaimed Lodge, "is the most abused and most popular man in the United States." This was a long-awaited signal. Instantly a shout broke forth from the galleries and was echoed back from the floor after a tempest of detached yells and catcalls and shouts of "Teddy," but gradually the whole gathering joined in the outbreak. Delegates were on their feet on chairs, waving hands, newspapers. One delegate had torn his coat off and was waving it, and there was general pandemonium. In the midst of it all someone hurled a huge "Teddy bear" among the delegates and it was pitched back and forth from one delegation to another, the tempest of noise becoming greater, if that were possible. Thirty minutes passed, 45, full three-quarters of an hour in this bewildering confusion of sight and sound.

For a time a fear was felt by some that the stampede was imminent, but political generals were glad to give the pent-up enthusiasm of the multitude this outlet of expression and at no time was there slightest apprehension among them that the well-laid plans would miscarry by some overpowering movement.

Frank H. Hitchcock, Taft manager, moved about the floor, smiling as the tumult was at its height.

"Cheers for Roosevelt today will be for Taft tomorrow," said he, with confidence.

With the subsidence of the Roosevelt storm, Lodge complete his stirring speech and then the convention turned to reports of other committees.

The final details of the platform are being arranged by the platform committee tonight and if completed the convention will be equipped tomorrow to make its declaration of policy and proceed to the election of candidates.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Rev. Mr. Reuter Addressed Children Last Sunday.

Children's day on last Sabbath was a pronounced success. The appointed committee took pains in decorating the church, which presented a beautiful appearance. A good congregation gathered at 11 a. m. to hear the pastor's sermon on "The Seven-Pillared Temple of Wisdom." His text was "Wisdom hat builded her house; she hath hews out her seven pillars." Prov., ix:1.

Among other things, the preacher said: "A good education is profitable to a man in a thousand ways. Herbert Spencer says: 'Education teaches a man how to live completely.' If that be true, then education must be profitable. The well-educated man can enjoy a profound lecture and a profound book, something the ignorant man cannot do. The well-educated man of enlarged vision and the man of enlarged vision sees what the ignorant cannot see. Moreover, the man possessed of a good education has the ability to achieve, and achievement is followed by the joy of success. The man of good education is never bankrupt. Financial disaster may overtake him, but he has a reserve capital, something to fall back on.

Education equips a man to meet the competitions of life. What puts one man ahead of another? The fact that he can do things better than the other man. Rev. W. F. Crofts has written a book in which he says: "College-bred men have furnished 32 per cent of all the members of congress, 46 per cent of all the United States senators, 50 per cent of all our vice-presidents, 65 per cent of our presidents, 73 per cent of all the members of our Supreme court.' The United States commissioner of education determined to find out the value of higher education. He ascertained that of 10,000 men who have distinguished themselves in business or professions, not one was uneducated and only 24 were self-educated.

The speaker emphasized Christian education as the best education, because it concerns itself with the development of all three departments of man's being.

An unusually large congregation gathered at night. Not all could be accommodated, some standing in the aisles. The appreciative congregation listened to an hour's program, consisting of songs and declamations. Children and young people rendered their parts well. The offering for the cause of education amounted to over $10. In the morning six persons united by letter, making a total of over 60 since October 1, 1907.
