MILADYS' New Fall Suit

A Local Store to Supply Needs of Southern Oregon Women and Misses at Exceptionally Low Prices.

The writer chanced to be passing through one of Medford's new stores the other day and saw the expressman unload a big shipment of boxes. At the same time the express company came in with a big load of pasteboard cartons.

Being a little curious, I asked the manager what they were getting in, in such quantity all at one time. He told me that the two entire departments were suits, and invited me to look them over the next day and write an article about what I thought about, whether a lady had to send or go away for her fall suit.

I want to say at the beginning that there is no reason why any woman living in Southern Oregon should feel that she had to go or send away.

I was amazed when I saw the assortment of stylish new fall tailored suits for women. I am just out from the east and I was surprised that the styles should come out here so soon. I imagined that the styles were at least one year behind the east, but I find they are just the same as the largest eastern stores will show this fall, and I can assure you that the prices are just as low, and in many instances lower, than the same styles could be purchased for in the east.

A look through the leading fashion publications, such as the Ladies' Home Journal, Delineator, Woman's Home Companion, Saturday Evening Post and others will show you the styles better than I can describe them, but a far better way would be for you to visit the store and examine the styles for yourself. The jackets come in the short, medium and three-quarter lengths; are trimmed with many different and varied kinds of fancy braids, buttons and bands.

If you prefer a plain style, I saw a number of very neat effects, although plain.

The skirts are, for the most part, plain, but flared at the bottom, although many pleated styles are shown. The wide folds are also Think of the assortment which we offer. Now is the time to select your Fall suit. Over 200 to show at one time and no two alike. We have marked every single suit at the lowest possible price and we will positively not cut a price until the last of the season and that means after Jan. 1st, 1908. Why? Because when we reduce the price, even a little bit, we are losing money. We cannot afford to reduce a price because these suits are marked too close in the first place.

You will be delighted with the styles this Fall and the cloths are beautiful and so durable. The best thing about these suits is the price.

in evidence, with the braids on edge and placed in ripple effect around the bottom.

The cloths are very new and rich, coming in the dark mixed chevrons and fancy mixed stripes; also wide wale, diagonals and many French and English mixtures are shown. The suits this season are very durable and show those neat finishing touches so dear to the heart of every woman who delights in being well dressed and found only on those suits which are strictly tailored and finished by the best workmen.

Really, the showing of suits in this store shows the push and energy of the buyer, for it certainly took hard work and judgment which comes only from years of experience in buying from the best manufacturers. The manager told me that they only bought from the best manufacturers direct, and never from jobbers or middlemen. By buying direct and for cash they are able to make better prices, and I assure you that no one having any knowledge of values can kick on this store's prices.

A very broad and liberal policy is followed at this store. Everything is marked in plain figures and at very low margins. Every suit is guaranteed to give service or a new one will cheerfully be given when you tell them you are not satisfied. All alterations are free and a fit is guaranteed or no sale. Could anything be safer? Few stores will back their goods so strongly, but this is the modern way and the right way.

As an uninterested party and a newcomer to Medford, I am very agreeably surprised to learn that such a store as the Baker-Hutchason Company is here, and from what I know of the management, I feel confident that anybody can get satisfaction by buying of them, for should the goods prove poor, I know Mr. Hutchason will make it good, if you will only ask him. They don't urge you to buy—you are always welcome to look.
