COAL LAND SOLD.

ASHLAND, Or., May 14.—Illinois capitalists, who have been represented here by C. W. Earl and F. T. Guthrie, have purchased the Ashland Coal company's holdings, east of Ashland three miles, with the machinery on the property, and have also leased nearly 1000 acres of land adjoining the 80 acres controlled by the coal company, and will develop the coal prospects found upon the property.
They have made careful examinations and had tests of the coal made by government experts, who have pronounced it high-grade bituminous coal. Mr. Earl, who is a son of an Illinois coal operator, has gone East to arrange for the beginning of work, it is said, and for the shipment of a lot of machinery to use in the mines here. Several hundred feet of tunneling has been made by the Ashland company, composed of local citizens, but lack of capital necessitated a shutting down of operations. With the prospects looking better, development work proceeded.

THIRTY VARIETIES OF APPLES

(Ashland Tidings.)
W. J. Dean, the pioneer school teacher of the Wagner Creek valley, west of Ashland, who a number of years since dropped the pedagogic's rod and took up the more independent life of a farmer and horticulturist, in that fertile region, was in Ashland yesterday. The sale a few days ago of the remaining 58 acres of the H. Coleman place, in his neighborhood to Mr. Powers, a new resident of the Talent section, for a consideration of some $6500, served to remind him that it was the last of the old Goddard donation land claim which has been divided and subdivided until it now supports eight or more families, showing the rapid development of this region and its devotion to small holdings of orchard and garden lands.
Mr. Dean himself confines his energies to 14 acres and has become a most enthusiastic and intensive horticulturist, with the greatest faith in the future of the Rogue River valley as a rich and prosperous fruit section. Orchard and garden and alfalfa occupy his 14 acres, with peaches and apples predominating in the orchard, all promising a bumper yield this season. Mr. Dean has a penchant for apples and boasts of no less than 30 different varieties thriving in the orchard. The fact that his last harvest showed less than one wormy apple in a thousand speaks well for the effective methods which the vigilant horticulturist may employ against the omnipresent pests.

WOLVERINE CLUB

Michiganers of Valley Plan to Form Association
Mrs. H. L. Conrad, assistant secretary of the Commercial club, desires all former residents of the State of Michigan living in Medford and the Rogue River valley to call at the Commercial club rooms and register.
Mr. and Mrs. Conrad are former residents of Kalamazoo, Mich., and Mrs. Conrad is now a writer for the Kalamazoo and other Michigan papers, she having been formerly society editor of the Telegraph of that city. This means of registration is intended as a step toward getting the former Wolverines together to form a Michigan association.
There is much in this section of Oregon to attract the average Michigander, and a good number of them have taken up their residences here. He is right in his native element when he is in the vicinity of saw-mills and lumber camps, copper mines and orchards, and he also finds the climate of Oregon far superior to that of his native state, being devoid of the long, cold winters. Here he finds the undeveloped resources such as made his state great, only on a larger scale, and there is no one quicker than he to recognize in this section bright prospects for the future. Of course, the celery that made Kalamazoo famous or the breakfast food brand that is synonymous with the name of Battle Creek are not to be found in very large quantities in this section, but there is plenty of opportunity for future development in that line.

Almost without exception the native of Michigan who comes to the Rogue River valley never returns, but becomes imbued with the booster spirit and puts forth his best efforts to induce his friends "back home" to come to Southern Oregon, the land of the big red apple and pine trees that would make the former monarchs of the forests of the peninsula state look like saplings.
All former Michiganers will do well to register with Mrs. Conrad, and thus get in touch with each other. Southern Oregon is the Wolverine's paradise, where, as we have stated, he is in his native element. There are many here. There is room for many more.

DIED.
May 10, 1909, Martha Elizabeth Matthews, aged 8 years, 2 months and 23 days, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Matthews on Upper Rogue river. After three weeks of illness, and after the best of medical attendance and care seemed of no avail, death claimed the little one. Little Lizzie was a general favorite to all who knew her, and she will be greatly missed by all. The remains were laid to rest in the family burial ground near Rogue river, May 11. The funeral services were rendered by Dr. Holt of Eagle Point. The family has the sympathy of the entire community in this, their sad bereavement.

he fell to the floor and died within a few minutes. He had told his wife but a moment before he was stricken that he had rested well during the night and was feeling well. Funeral services will be held at the grave in Odd Fellows' cemetery today at 11 o'clock, Rev. Hoxie officiating.
Deceased was a native of Missouri and came to Oregon in 1850 and lived near Salem for a number of years. He was an ordained Christian minister and preached the gospel for the greater part of his life. He was 76 years of age and was married about three years ago to Miss Charles of this city. He was well known in Medford, where he lived several years. He had no known living relatives.

Rev. J. L. Adams, a pioneer minister of Oregon, died very suddenly at the county hospital yesterday morning. He arose from his night's sleep and was dressing himself when
