BUILDING ROAD DOWN ROGUE RIVER TO SEA

The government is making good progress under the direct supervision of the forestry service in extending a road down Rogue river into Curry county. This particular stretch of road will open up a wide latitude of country rich in mineral and prolific of the best marketable pine. When this work has been completed 10 per cent of the proceeds will be diverted to the school fund, thus increasing the permanent means of keeping up schools. About $5000 has been appropriated to be used in developing the highway, and it is expected that congress will set aside $5000 more to be used on this project.

Extreme difficulty is met in some places. For instance, along Rogue river men in taking the initiative step in building were swung out along the bluffs of the river until the drilling could be done.

It is thought that the contiguous territory will yield millions of fir and pine, which will increase the revenues of the government at the rate of $2 and $2.50 a million.

JACK ANDREWS GOES THE SUICIDE ROUTE

The suicide whose body was found in the Oregon hotel at Portland Friday night was identified as Jack Andrews, formerly a well-known conductor on the Southern Pacific between Ashland and Roseburg. He had quit railroading some years ago and resided in Alaska, returning without having made any thing. Dependency appeared to take possession of him, his old associates say, and of late he had gone from bad to worse. His self-destruction therefore was no surprise to those who had known him.

Andrews married a daughter of Captain Mayo, who afterward left him. She is living in Seattle, whither a dispatch was sent informing her of her husband's death.

Superintendent Fields of the Southern Pacific knew Andrews well and speaks kindly of him.

According to the proprietor of the Oregon hotel, Andrews engaged a room there Thursday evening. He was not seen afterward, and when found last Friday night he had evidently been dead for nearly 20 hours, having asphyxiated himself by turning on the gas.
