APPLES BECOMING SCARCE IN OREGON'S METROPOLIS

It is estimated that there are now between 10,000 and 12,000 boxes of apples in storage in this city and in addition to this there are probably good boxes in the new market on Front street, says the Oregonian. Further shipments are being received daily or weekly and stocks of staple stocks have diminished in many parts of the state.

To some this statement might seem to give the apple market a rather poor showing, but from what Andrew can tell the market looks like some of the action. One of them said,

"There is no reason for concern regarding the future of the apple market in Oregon. It is still strong."

There will be a demand for apples in a while.

10,000 to 12,000 boxes of fruit now in storage here, and probably for a good deal more. It must be remembered that there are still three full months for apple consumption before the ad of the first offerings of the 1908 crop, and there is no ground for fear that the demand in that time will not take everything in sight.

Remnants of the 1907 crop are now coming in from all the apple districts of the state, and a large proportion of these are apples that have to be worked off at low prices, but they move, and the fact that the apple market holds steady in strength in the face of the recent heavy offerings of common and inferior stock is the best of signs for the future.

Country stocks are now practically cleaned up. From this time on shipments from the outside will grow smaller daily until they cease altogether, and there is every reason for the belief that the market will stiffen steadily as the season advances.

Apple values still show a wide range. The best of the Hood River and other choice offerings are held at $7.50 to $25.00 a box, while the common sorts go at prices ranging from $1.25 to $2.25 for the most part.

GRANTS PASS TEACHER TAKES MAN AS PUPIL

What appears to have been a runaway marriage has developed in Grants Pass. Miss Vinton Matriss, one of the high school teachers, failed to appear before her classes Friday, and investigation has shown that she left with O. E. Morley, a mining man of Grants Pass, presumably for Seattle. They had been friends for several months. They took supper together at the Western hotel Thursday evening, then boarded the northbound train. Neither gave the slightest intimation of their plans and their disappearance was a great surprise to all their friends.

APPLES CLEANING UP THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

Apples are cleaning up everywhere in the Pacific northwest. The supply is not a quarter of what the trade expected, those remaining and in consequence prices are stiffer, and in some instances already advanced. Fancy fruit is selling freely around $2 to $2.25 and extra fancy rules between $2.25 and $2.50 a box. The demand has been unusually great, because of the low prices that had ruled since the flurry in the money market. People seemed to have money for apples, however.—Portland Journal.

terred over the state within the national forest reserves, and it is desired that this land be taken over by the national government and a compact body of forest land equal in extent and value given to the state for the same. It is believed that such a plan, if followed, would be of great benefit to the state in preserving its forests. The resolution was presented by H. D. Langille and was approved by Charles Y. Galloway, the state land agent. Oregon's congressional delegation will be asked to present the matter to congress.

2. The stamp which registers the sign was bent and ran into the Pilot Box.

Modford January 22, 1908.

National Cash Register Company,

Dayton, O.

I am sorry to enter a serious complaint regarding the cash register sold to me by your company last year.

While the register has been worked fairly actively, you must remember that Medford is a small, if growing, place and that its trade should not wear out and give up a $200 machine in a few months.

For the past ten days we have had to hire a watchman to play a hose on the machine all night. After one of our ordinary Saturday nights sales the register gave off steam for 30 hours and made it unnecessary to turn on the lights after 9 p. m., it's glow being clear intense!

Will you please explain the cause for this unseasoned action on the part of your register and refund to us the purchase price. Very sincerely,

W. F. ISAACS

Medford.
