THE ANTI-BRYAN CAMPAIGN.

The New York World is conducting a fantastic campaign against W. J. Bryan. It loudly heralds his candidacy and asserts that the black shadow of defeat will again enfold democracy should the Nebraskan be its standard bearer. It ascribes the failure of the democratic party in the last three national elections to Bryan's leadership. It points to Governor Johnson of Minnesota as the one Moses to lead the party into the land of promise.

The World but echoes Wall street's desires. To the World and the element it represents was due Parker's nomination and Bryan's defeats in the two previous campaigns. It championed the "democracy" of such men as William C. Whitney and Thomas F. Ryan, whose fortunes were built on the corruption of public officials, but it can not stand for the democracy of the Nebraskan.

The World stood for predatory plutocracy in the last three campaigns. It conducted a bitter personal campaign against Theodore Roosevelt in 1904 and the more it abused the big stick the more votes the president received. The louder it shouts now against Bryan the more certain it makes his nomination.

As a tribune of the common people the World is thoroughly discredited. When Joseph Pulitzer, its owner, and probably the greatest of living newspaper men, was a poor journalist, he was a socialist. His millions piled up, a tribute to his genius, his views, perhaps insensibly, became the views of the very rich. Naturally, we find the World opposing both Roosevelt and Bryan.

As for Governor Johnson, he represents the forlorn hope of Wall street and the silk stocking democracy, he is merely someone to rally around to attempt a defeat of Bryan in the convention. His popularity among the Swedes of Minnesota does not by any means indicate a following in other states. He is a local character, unknown outside of his home state, and there is nothing about him to wean the masses away from Bryan, whose name is one to conjure with.

The old democratic party, the party of Tilden and of Cleveland, represented by the World, has long been dying by inches, as the old whig party died. What life the democratic party has today is due to the infusion of populism or Bryanism, as it has been called, and Roosevelt's strength with the people is due also to his championship of these once despised principles.

MINISTER DENOUNCES PROHIBITION AS FAILURE

RENO, Nev., March 24.—Rev. Mr. Youmans W. Synder, of Ohio, known as the "boys' minister of America," who has just finished his lecture tour in this city, has announced his disapproval of the prohibition movement which is being agitated in Reno. He said:

"I am not in favor of local option and prohibition which is now being advocated so strongly by the clergy. I do not agree with the clergy that the sale of liquor or gambling should be abolished in any city. I say that in every city of any size in the United States in which local option and prohibition has been tried it has proven a failure.

"I believe that the liquor traffic has its evil as well as its vices. Christ himself drank. The scriptures do not say it is wrong to drink."

DEMENTED BUTCHER DISAPPEARS AT ASHLAND

Frank Schoenwald Sr., a demented butcher, aged 54 years, from Hillyard, near Spokane, Wash., disappeared in Ashland about 10 o'clock yesterday morning while his son, Frank Schoenwald, Jr., stepped into a telegraph office to send a message home for money, and the latter has been able to get no trace since of his father, who it is feared has taken to the mountains and may suffer from the exposure. Schoenwald, Sr., sold out his market at Hillyard recently and went to Klamath Falls to look for a new location, and it was while at Ellensburg that he was attacked with dementia, which, however does not take violent form.

The son came to look after his father and had started home with him, but ran out of money here.—Tidings.

CAKE'S NOMINATION VIRTUALLY CONCEDED

Portland Telegram Tells of Successful Tour of State and Warm Greeting Everywhere Given Statement No. 1 Candidate—In Medford Tomorrow.

PORTLAND, Or., March 25.—In virtually conceding the nomination of H. M. Cake, the Telegram says in part: Attracting crowds that numerically have been a great surprise to everyone, H. M. Cake is touring the state in behalf of his candidacy for the republican nomination for United States senator.

Mr. Cake began his tour two weeks ago and has spoken practically every night since that time. Mr. Cake made many warm friends and a large following during his campaign two years ago when he lost the nomination for senator by a very narrow margin. These friends and others who have rallied to his standard during the intervening period are succeeding in creating real enthusiasm for the aspirant as he tours the state. At every town in which he has spoken he has been heartily received and his addresses have been heard by crowds greater by far than usually gather to hear a political address.

Is a Forceful Orator.

Mr. Cake is an able speaker, forceful in delivery and wonderfully clear in expression. His talks are unique in that they differ so widely from a political harangue. He assails no one, nor does he resort to crimination of any kind. He tells what he has to say in a clear, logical way, a way that appeals strongly to the people.

In each of Mr. Cake's addresses he has urgently insisted upon the republicans of Oregon remaining loyal to their party, loyalty to party, he says, is all that is necessary for republicans to continue in the ascendency in this state. He is an ardent admirer of President Roosevelt, and in every address has maintained that it is to the best interests to not only the entire people, but the people of Oregon particularly, that the president's policies be maintained. He is strongly in favor of the reclamation work that is being done throughout the state by the present administration. It should be continued without abatement, he insists, and he also urges that ample appropriations should be made for the rivers and harbors of this state. The Willamette, he contends, should be opened to commerce as far as the possible head of navigation

Stands for Statement No. 1.

One feature of Mr. Cake's address that invariably appeals strongly to his hearers is his position with reference to the election of United States senators. Mr. Cake believes in the people and consequently believes in the election of senators by the people. He declares that, if elected, he will support a federal amendment providing for the popular election of United States senators. In this connection he recites the history of the people to achieve this end. For years and years various efforts have been made by the people to elect their own senators, and he shows that there is a provision in the constitution at this time for so doing.

This subject, however, according to Mr. Cake, is not the overshadowing feature of the campaign. The election of United States senators by the people must prevail eventually, but the needs of Oregon and the maintenance of republican principles should be the topic instead.

Mr. Cake's itinerary includes practically the entire state. Local machine politicians who professed to have little faith in his chances for success are now thoroughly alarmed. They see in the large crowds that are flocking to hear Mr. Cake's addresses and in the attitude of the different newspapers throughout the state favoring Mr. Cake a menace to the old system which they hope to perpetuate.
