ANTI-SALOON FINANCES

Statements of much interest concerning the financing of the prohibition fight in Jackson and other counties were made by the Rev. J. R. Knodell, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, at the rally held Wednesday afternoon in the Baptist church.

According to Mr. Knodell, $1650 was raised in Jackson county and spent in the cause of prohibition. The money was secured by pledges for monthly and quarterly payments secured from believers in the cause.

The organization of the Anti-Saloon league, as described by Mr. Knodell, is a loose one, resembling that of political organizations, consisting of a state body, working through county central committees, which work through precinct committees.

Each district is to provide a fund for the prohibition cause. The southern district is to provide approximately $5000 a year. Of this $5000, Jackson county is to raise $1250, Douglas $1250, Josephine $1000, Klamath $625, Lake $300, etc.

As three-fifths of all the money raised in each county goes to the central body of the league, who make no accounting to anyone, it is easy to see why the anti-saloon agitators keep at it—there is good money in it.

In addition to this regular fund come the emergency funds, raised in the frenzy of battle. Zealous crusaders, enthused by emotional and sentimental appeals, open their pocketbooks liberally, and collections are a usual occurrence at meetings to "defray expenses."

In East Portland during the campaign just closed, the Anti-Saloon league advertised for solicitors to raise money as follows in the Morning Oregonian:

"Wanted—Twenty enthusiastic temperance men and women of good address; good wages. 420 Commercial building; references required."

The solicitors were given the following "certificate" to aid them in collecting the money:

"Portland, Or., May 22, 1908—To Whom It May Concern: Bearer represents the East Side Anti-Saloon league, and is doing a personal house to house canvass for the league. At present we have from twenty to forty men engaged in this personal heart to heart work and have an expense of $100 to $150 per day.

Bearer is authorized to accept such contribution as you may feel able to make.

We earnestly ask that you give us at least $1 for this work. If everyone gives a little, we will be able to meet the tremendous expense of this campaign promptly. Earnestly and faithfully yours,—East Side Anti-Saloon League."

These solicitors were guaranteed $3 a day and were promised half of all they collected in addition. "If you collect $10 we'll pay you $5," was the promise made by John L. Schuylerman, who was running the affair.

Jackson county people are asked to put up $1250 a year for "the cause," three-fifths of which leaves the county. As long as they continue to put up, the agitation will continue; agitators, who pay no taxes, but are supported by a direct tax upon the public will continue to come and go among us, telling us how to run our affairs, keeping the excitement at fever pitch and dividing the community against itself.

"This," said Mr. Knodell, "is a battle of self interest against the public interest." Of course there is no self interest in securing as salary a large share of the $25,000 yearly contributions from the zealous.

Social and Personal

COMMUNICATIONS

The Daily Tribune

The beneficial and energizing influence of a daily paper in any community of any considerable importance through its industries and its population is perhaps more certainly made manifest when that community is deprived suddenly of the daily news benefits and privileges it had enjoyed; and is shelved back upon the ancient customs and manners of "yesterday."

But a daily paper, in addition to being a medium for "news and opinions," is expected also to have a definite and fixed policy in the direction of what things need emphasis—being of common interest. That there shall be in the community that will take issue with the management in the matter of its policy matters not; it remains a fact still that the management must be characterized with a policy in which initiative and strength of purpose shall be the dominant factors.

That The Daily Tribune, since it came under the new management with George Putnam at its head, has had such a straightforward fixed policy in the work out of which it has been persistent, aggressive and determined, may not be gained. Whatever its mistakes—1) only the weekling who, being a nothing, makes no mistakes—it goes without saying that its straightforward, uncompromising attitude along certain lines of social interest has stamped it with being possessed with certain qualities necessary to the conservation of what things shall be deemed right from one's own standpoint.

Compelled by reasons of brevity, because of space, I shall offer herein one word only: The Daily Tribune was established in the interests of Medford and of Jackson county. It has a definite, fixed policy; it is a forum for the people; it recognizes without envy talent and ability in the community; its editorials are keen, logical and incisive. Therefore, doubt it not. The Daily Tribune as the pioneer daily of Jackson county will be published as being always useful to the masses here.

BEARS MORE NUMEROUS THAN EVER IN MOUNTAINS

Bears are more numerous in the mountains this year than they have been for some time. A few have been killed by hunters and a number of those that have been seen have escaped in the woods, says the Klamath Falls Herald. A few days ago William Yee was coming from Ashland with a load of fruit, and on the road in the mountains he encountered a large cinnamon bear. His horses were badly frightened and almost caused a runaway. The bear was allowed to go on his way unharmed.
