PLEASE THE PEOPLE.

A subscriber, who recently attempted to say some nice things about people in print evidently finds his efforts unappreciated, for he writes as follows to the editor of this paper:

"Would you please say why it is so difficult to satisfy the people of Medford in the matter of saying something which shall not rasp their feelings? The experience of some thus far has been that to speak with critical sincerity of local conditions is but to incur the displeasure of very many persons here, whose claims to a high degree of Christian perfection ought to place them on a very substantial basis of thought and conduct. On the other hand, we discover that for a person of an impulsive, sympathetic temperament to speak or write in praiseworthy manner of any person, or of such things as deserve recognition and commendation, is but to make enemies of those persons for and of whom such words have been spoken or written.

"The condition that Subscriber portrays has been noticed by many—not alone by those who dabble in printer's ink, but by anyone in almost any line who attempts to do anything. No matter what the attempt is, a certain element of the community at once arrays itself against these making the attempt—from force of habit, if there is no other reason. It is this unreasonable and unflinching opposition to progress of any kind that has caused the application of the word mossback, coined to fit the unregenerate.

Living in a small town makes people small. An isolated and solitary existence seems to be favorable to the development of peculiarities. With the admirable self-reliance that isolation brings, there is often a gross ignorance of the world and its ways, and to this ignorance is due much of the opposition to progress experienced in all Oregon cities—less in Medford than in any other.

Medford is as yet but in the beginning—in many things it is still crude, very crude. But every day sees it nearer the finished product, and it is less raw than its rivals. Still, many citizens cannot see its crudeness, which they are walking evidences of, and sincerely disbelieve it.

Because of this crudeness, this narrowness of vision, this lack of breadth, this provincialism, persons are constantly taking offense where none was intended. It is impossible to say anything that will not rasp somebody's tender and supersensitive feelings. And if they don't see anything themselves, some kind neighbor, who borrows their paper to save a subscription, will imagine it for them.

No, Subscriber, there is no way to keep in print and not offend someone. You can take Milton's "Paradise Lost," run it in sections, with a new name, and half the people will call you crazy to print such stuff, which they will declare isn't even poetry, because it doesn't rhyme, and some of the other half will have rasped feelings because they will think you are hitting at them or some of their friends.

You cannot please the people in writing matter for publication any more than the man in Esop's fable could please them by carrying his jackass instead of riding it, and, gentle Subscriber, after you have tried it for awhile you will do as all successful editors do—write to please yourself—and if you are an average man with average tastes and average courage and average honesty, you will suit the average person, whether he agrees with you or not. With the growth of the city will come the accomplishments, the culture and the appreciation, the ripened product of the crudeness of today.

Medford helped very materially in making Ashland's Fourth of July celebration a success. Thirteen hundred Medfordites bought excursion tickets and many others went in autos and conveyances; the float used in the Portland rose carnival was shipped to Ashland for the parade; the Medford papers gave their space freely to boun the celebration, and in many other ways Medford did its share to show that only good will exists here towards the sister city. In spite of this, the Ashland correspondent of the Portland Telegram says that large numbers of Jacksonville and Grants Pass people attended, and never even mentioned those from Medford, who comprised the bulk of the visitors. Individuals like this correspondent are the cause of the friction that has existed between the towns in the past, but the time has gone by when trifles due to small people can upset the cordial relations now in process of firm establishment.

What has become of Governor Folk of Missouri as presidential or vice-presidential timber? A year ago he figured largely as a prospective candidate, but since then his name has not been mentioned.

Automobile.

Bubble bubble bubble. Up and down the hill. Through the sunny valleys. Where the woods were still.

His Chance.

He was a humorist who lacked opportunity. When it came to him he was wide awake and prepared. It came to him recently at the board.

The Effect.

He waited all his life for the right time to say what he had to say. Now he is a humorist.

A Little Wisdom.

As the night drew in, the moon came out. The stars were shining brightly.

Not a Busy Season.

The summer comes with a grand zest. And all professions lead it. The summer months are busy.

On the Way.

A traveler smiled at a certain East coast provincial town in vain for the much overdone train on the branch line.

Humdrum.

The longest tasks of life are made of little things. The sewing of the buttons on the button.

Against the Custom.

Grate the friction. Take off their glasses. You shouldn't, and I'll punch your face for you.

She Knows.

The maiden gazing at her glass. It is very nice. By putting on a gown that shows her figure.

Heading Him Off.

Reggie says: An my dear, I think I shall sing that beautiful song "Huddled in the Cradle of the Deep." Should I not?

A Change.

"You mean to leave?" he asked to try. "I'm going to the States. I'm going to the States."

Evolution Again.

"Advertising is one of the few things that have not changed since the beginning of time."

How She Did It.

A young girl went to her father. "This is my dear old father."

A Slight Misunderstanding.

"Is your occupation a sedentary one?" "Well, it might be, except that I can't get out much while I'm working."

Overburdened.

Here's a little story for you. A man went to the bank to borrow money.

Quite Natural.

Crusty (to a customer): Can't you stop that foot? He is moving every one with his foot.

Quite the Reverse.

The minister (to a young man): Will you be seated? The young man (to the minister): That would be very kind of you.

He Hadn't Shaved.

"He—listen! Don't you hear something scratching?" "See! It's your head, I guess, dear. You've shaved."

Change.

"The minister (to a young man): Will you be seated? The young man (to the minister): That would be very kind of you."

Resourceful.

"Kibbler—What did you do when all your teeth were lost?" "Barker—Feed 'em to the ladies of the party."

Hoyle.

Hoyle was not really the inventor of whist, although often so stated to be, but he was the first who introduced scientific whist to the public.

Crossing the Ocean.

The following bits of conversation may be heard several thousand times each day.

As Arranged For Older Children.

Miss Mary was the possessor of a diminutive and miniature specimen of the Ovis aries, a wood bearing and ruminant quadruped.

Fortune For Forgers.

The last person to suffer death for forgery in London was a Thomas Maynard, who was executed on Dec. 31, 1829.

Waits Who Became Famous.

The list of waits who have become famous, says the Deliberator, is a long one. It includes Sir Henry Stanley.

Smartness.

Do not be "smart." Whenever you see any of your mates showing signs of "smartness" in his work.

Disease and Remedies.

It is almost a truism among physicians that the intractability of a disease may be measured by the number of "infallible" remedies for it.

Sociologist Defined.

"A sociologist, in my boy, is a person who can inspect a garbage can and find enough material in it for a long lecture on the needs of society."
