AUDITORIUM, Denver, Col., July 9. -The "democratic piledriver," as the friends of Colonel James Guffey and Patrick H. McCarren have named the Bryan machine here, was working very smoothly today. Despite intense heat outside and gen ral belief that it would be several ours and possibly tomorrow before ominations could be closed, the crowds illed every sent and standing room. Bright faced, well-dressed women, lad for the most part in soft, clinging

So soon as the report of permanent organization had been adopted Chairoan Bell in a brief speech thanked the national committee for honoring him as temporary chairman and thank ed the convention for the manner in which it had treated him. He declared that it was an honor that the Pacific coast would appreciate, saying his selection was a tribute to the locality rather than to the individual. He was cothusiastically cheered as he concluded, the delegates rising and waving fidgs, buts and fans, in a beisterous at
