A JOURNALISTIC CHADBAND.

"Oh, what an abundance of divine grace would be needed to induce The Tribune to return to the path of common decency and to have a slight regard for the truth"

No, gentle reader, this is not one of the familiar family homilies of the virtuous Mr. Pecksniff or the unctious Rev. Mr. Chadband, though it reads like it. It is from the Medford Mail. There are other hypocrites besides those in Dickens.

The voice from the mourners' bench comes from one who has trod the primrose path from slot machines and card games in saloons to the immunity bath to head off a visit to McNeil's island, and now, like the Pharisee, he lifts his hands to high heaven and thanks God that he is not like other men.

Putting the lid on gambling sometimes removes temptation and keeps one on "the path of decency" even though there is no regard for the truth, and the stolen ideas of others are palmed off as original, as shown in the deadly parallel.

Since when have immunity baths and "divine grace" become synonymous terms? Honesty, truth, divine grace—what right has one whose policy veers at the sign of a dollar like a weather vane in the wind, to prate of such things and to strut in morality like a peacock on parade?

A "TAINTED" EDITORIAL.

The Medford Mail contains an editorial commenting upon the news printed in The Tribune regarding the recall petition against Councilman Olwell in which the assertion that prohibitionists were back of the movement is pronounced false and "tainted" news.

Despite the Mail's assertion, the effort to remove Mr. Olwell originated with prohibitionists, and the action was taken because Mr. Olwell voted to keep the Hotel Nash in operation. This and this only, is the reason Mr. Olwell's unfitness for the position has suddenly been discovered.

When Mr. Olwell voted to renew the hotel license, Councilman Wortman, prohibition leader, challenged his vote and the effort to remove Mr. Olwell began at once, in order to give the prohibitionists control of the council.

The effort to remove Mr. Olwell is deplorable and will be futile. It is another instance of that petty spite that seems to have run riot among the Lilliputians of Medford. Mr. Olwell has never failed to do anything that was requested of him as a councilman, and the First ward has not suffered. He is in every way a representative, worthy and public-spirited citizen, one of the city's best boosters, and has done far more to uphold the city than those who are seeking his removal.

If the people of the First ward had wanted another councilman in place of Mr. Olwell, they could have had one last winter at the city election, but no effort was made. He was willing to resign, but was requested to continue, and it was not until Mr. Olwell voted to renew the Hotel Nash license that the effort to oust him was attempted.

The best comment on the Mail's course is to apply the following from its own editorial: "It absolutely disregarded the truth, was semi-conscious of the fact that it was lying, but its torpid mind did not realize that its disregard for the truth would be so evident."

WANTS A SIMULACHRE IN SENATE.

The Portland Oregonian, which has been denouncing popular election of senators and Statement No. 1 and demanding a return to old conditions, describes the result of these conditions in New York in an editorial as follows:

"It is pitiable to think how little weight, with all its brains and all its money, New York has in the affairs of the country. In the senate, for example, that imperial commonwealth is represented by two ghastly specters. One of them, Depew, is clothed with the tattered remnants of a reputation for amusing folly, but he never had the slightest vestige of the qualifications of a statesman. Now the country knows that it was in a measure a shield for dishonesty. Poor old Depew is bad enough as the representative of New York, but Platt is worse. This All-Hallowe'en summer, this latter spring, would make another Falstaff very well if he had Falstaff's wit or his manhood. But Platt has neither. Not without ability of a disreputable kind at one time, he now totters about, the mere simulacrum of a man able only to cling to his dollars and devise new schemes for adding to them. Such is the representation of New York in the United States senate, and yet that state presumes to give lessons to her sister commonwealths upon political respectability."

This is the condition in nearly every state where corporations control through representative government and it is the condition which caused the popular revolt in Oregon, and the adoption of Statement No. 1. It is to put Oregon in the class of New York, to put Platt's and Depew's in the senate from the state that the Oregonian is opposing popular election of senators.

Only the day before this editorial description of Platt as "the mere simulacrum of a man," the Oregonian quoted with approval Platt's opinion condemning Statement No. 1 as though the simulachre was an oracle of wisdom.

POLICE SPIES IN PARIS.

Legitimist Leader Mystified Over Revelation by Prefect Lepine.

Paris Gil Blas gives the world an illustration of the workings of the French secret police in an anecdote which it publishes with an assurance that the incident happened recently.

A distinguished member of Parliament sent out invitations for a large dinner at his house in the Faubourg St. Germain. He is a Legitimist, and it was hardly concealed that the gathering was to have a certain political significance.

As soon as he heard of it Police Prefect Lepine called upon the host and with the utmost politeness solicited a couple of invitations for agents on his staff.

"M. le Comte," said he, "I give you my word of honor the men to whom I entrust them will look like perfect gentlemen; they will act like gentlemen—in a word, they will be worthy of the honor you confer on them by making them your guests."

The count was very haughty, however. He explained with ill-concealed disdain that his party would be made up of the finest blood in France and any outsider would be at once conspicuous.

M. Lepine appeared to be unshaken; at least he yielded the matter gracefully, merely adding: "At least, M. le Comte, you will allow me to see the list of your guests. My duty compels me to know who will be there."

M. le Comte made no objection. He produced the list, and Lepine examined it carefully. He was wrinkled in smiles as he returned it. With many bows he apologized for having troubled M. le Comte.

"It was so unnecessary," said he. "I really would have no use for those invitations. I see that M. le Comte at ready has on his list of guests the names of five of my most trusted observers."

The count and his friends have been wondering ever since whether this was literally true or whether it was a shrewd device to render the gathering innocuous.

Quick Changes.

London Tit-Bits tells how J. Pierpont Morgan succeeded in interviewing the pope and Queen Helena within half an hour. The queen fixed the appointment for 10:45 o'clock and the pope for 11:15 o'clock on the same morning.

The difficulty of the task was increased owing to the fact that etiquette prescribes that for the queen's audience Mr. Morgan should appear in a frock coat with a fancy tie and his daughter, who was to accompany him, should appear in a light-colored walking gown, with an appropriate hat, while the etiquette of the Vatican prescribed for Mr. Morgan evening dress and a white tie and for the lady a black gown and a black lace veil over her hair, both to be unglorified and unadorned.

A quick-change artist might have made light of this matter. Even Mr. Morgan and his daughter effected the transformation in five minutes after a twenty minutes' interview with the queen, and a fast motor did the rest.

How He Made Money Fly.

"Though not a rich man and not overinclined to waste money, nevertheless I spent cash with a recklessness that was of the Monte Cristo order while on a tour of Latin American countries recently," said Professor P. C. Everett of Harvard university.

"It was in the United States of Columbia, where my prodigality reached its zenith. Meeting an old friend, I asked him to dine with me, and when I came to settle cheerfully paid a check that called for $900. Then I tipped the waiter to $40 and paid $100 for two extra fine chairs. These figures are absolutely true, but it is proper to state that the cost of my dinner was estimated in the currency of the country and that it stood me in reality only $9.80, a dollar in our United States money being worth $100 of the Columbia. So it was that the waiter got a right valuation only 40 cents, and the two perfects were 50 cents apiece on our Yankee basis."—Baltimore American.

Curious Double Romance.

Of a curious double romance an observer says in a letter to the London Times: "On March 14 last, while on the voyage between Jamaica and the Bahamas of Panama at 11 a. m. the sun being then nearly in the zenith, a double rainbow of brilliant coloring appeared, forming a complete circle round the sun. The lines were being some distance from the sun, the outer bow being about an equal distance from the inner. A clear horizon showed no signs of rain. Neither the sun, rain nor any other sound or sight had ever seen a similar phenomenon. The water bow faded gradually away, and then the inner bow."

A Real Sincere.

The most striking political squire in England is the property of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, lord great chamberlain to his majesty, King Edward. Only on two occasions does he have to do the duties of office, when parliament opens and on those rare occasions when there is a coronation. And his salary is $22,500 a year. When the king swears the legislative council the lord great chamberlain is master of ceremonies. At coronations he is the most dignified, gorgeous and florid of all the titled functionaries that take attendance upon the sovereign.

Knocking a Weapon.

"Expect to kill anything with that will?" "Nothing but time." "Fshaw, you will do well if you kill time with it!"

It's Headed This Way.

I was that May, in garb of green, would ever stay a smiling queen. For then might we with lips that smile no gladness be most all the while.

But May, sweet May, is bound to pass. She will not stay. The wisomest lass, comes to her stand—it makes us sick—hot, screaming red fourth of July.

Of Course.

"Why does a woman always want to be in style?" "Give it up." "But it is so easy." "Well?" "Because it is unfashionable not to."

Born That Way.

"What makes you act so foolishly?" asked the exasperated lady. "Comes natural," solemnly replied the offending youth.

No Defeat, Though.

"He met his Lu at a bathing beach." "Good swimmer?" "In the sea all of the time." "Then he met his water Lu."

Never Was There.

"I am sure of one thing." "What's that?" "There's plenty of you at the top." "So do you know?"
