

HOPPERS BAD? BUY TURKEYS

McCray Has New Way of Ridding Young Orchards of Grasshoppers

Two million seven hundred forty-two thousand grass hoppers in two months is the record claimed by V. C. McCray, manager of the Fish Lake Ditch Co., for his flock of turkeys. He claims to have saved the puzzle of freeing orchards from the destructive pests and at the same time made them commercially profitable.

"The company's orchard east of the city is the finest looking young orchard in the entire valley," said Mr. McCray. "The grass hoppers kept the trees free of leaves last year in spite of the netting and paper bags, but this year, the turkeys are keeping the trees unharmed by the hoppers."

"Grass hoppers are thicker along the 'desert' than any other place. I bought a flock of 457 turkeys and the way they go after the hoppers is a wonder. They just now a clean sweep through the pests. I estimate a hundred hoppers a day the average capacity of the average turkey, though if they could get more down, they would. Why at night the birds are all swelled up and the hoppers are actually sticking out of their mouths, which they can't find room for below. The birds are the fattest ever and will sell well for the fall market. I predict that in another year, every orchardist will have his flock of turkeys and then it is good bye hoppers."
