Bulletin of Oregon Agricultural College Urges the Raising of More Hogs

A recent bulletin issued by the Ore gon agricultural college says:

There is no branch of animal hus bandry in a grain growing section that will give quicker, surer, or larger re turns than will hogs. Despite this fact, Oregon for a number of years has utter ly failed to produce enough pork products to supply the home demand. It is certainly a strange anomaly that ter train loads of Nebraske fed hogs are of producing sections of the continent, brought past one of the best hog These hogs can be grown and finished for the market on field peas, or upon wheat and barley. It has been demonstrated by farmers in this section that hogs can be profitably grown on wheat pasture during the summer, Experimental feeding has shown that three and one-half pounds of wheat will produce a gain of one pound of live weight on a hog fattened for bacon. For a longer period of fattening so as to secure a lard type of hog, more grain will be required. The heavier larded ed hog will require about 450 pounds of wheat for 100 pounds gain in live weight. This at 5½ cents per pound would bring to the grower 73 cents per bushel for his wheat. The bacon type would take less wheat because the finishing will be done in shorter time, hence the less grain consumed per 250 pounds of wheat.

This at 5% cents per pound will re-turn to the grower 94 cents per bushe for his wheat. If the young hogs are mainly grown on posiure, such as al time they should be taught to cat a small supplemental grain feed. After this he will make a satisfactory growth on good pasture. By fall this pig should weigh 125 pounds, costing 315 cents per pound. This includes the cost of sup-plemental grain fed and the value of the pasture. The pig is then finished for market, and during this process consumes 350 pounds of wheat and make sumes 350 pounds of wreat and makes an additional 100 pounds gain. The cost of growing the pig is $4,37, but after consuming 350 pounds of wheat he weighs 225 pounds worth 5° cents per pound, or represents a value of $12.37, thus returning to the grower for his wheat $8 or $1.37 per bushel. Equally good results can be secured from peas. The hogs can harvest these themselves. It is believed that a quar-ter section of good wheat land shown to peas would fatten 250 hogs worth 2000 and at the same time carry over the breeding stock.

It may be well to state that the your er the pig the greater gains are secured for the food consumed. Also the short-er the period of fattening the greater the gains for food consumed. This is largely the reason why the bacon type is the more desirable to grow. Further-more, peas and wheat, or peas and barley produce the very best quality of bacon hog. In fact the wheat, bar-ley and pea fed hog will command a premium over the corn-fed hog in any
