

MANY FISH IF EGGS HATCH

Ten Million Fry if Good Luck Attends Efforts of Officials

GRANTS PASS, Or., August 27.—The development of the fishing industry of Rogue river is being systematically carried on by the United States bureau of fisheries, with H. L. Kelly, fish culturist, in charge of the work. Hatcheries are maintained at Findley Eddy, on Rogue river, 14 miles below Grants Pass; at the falls in the Illinois river, and on Elk creek, a tributary of Upper Rogue river. A large private hatchery is also maintained at the mouth of Rogue river by R. D. Hume, the Wedderburn canneryman.

The capacity of the hatchery on the Illinois is to be greatly increased. Last year this hatchery handled over 4,000,000 salmon eggs, all of which were hatched there, and the young salmon turned loose in the river, except 300,000 of the eggs, which were shipped to the Hume hatchery. This season Fish Culturist Kelly expects to secure at least 10,000,414 salmon eggs. To have lumber with which to enlarge the hatchery building and the racks in the river for catching the fish and to make additional hatching troughs, 10,000 feet of lumber was brought in from Woodcock's mill, near Kerby. As there is only a mountain trail to the falls in the Illinois river, the lumber was rafted down that stream from below Kerby and the job took ten days of hard work and frequent risks of drowning for Mr. Kelly and his crew of ten men. The river is the lowest it has been for years, and as the channel passes most of the way through a gorge, with small falls, rapids and big boulders, it made the task a difficult one.

Racks Across River. The racks will be placed across the river at once and the salmon will be held until their eggs are ready to be taken. The eggs are hatched in troughs kept filled with running water, and the young salmon are kept in the troughs for about six weeks, by which time they are fairly well able to care for themselves, and are turned loose in the river. For this period no feed is required for the little fish. Where it is possible to secure better liver and the fish remnants at canneries, it is usual to keep the young salmon in the hatchery until they are four to five months old and have a length of six inches. They are then so large and swift that few get caught by the salmon trout, eels, crawfish and other enemies.

Large Revenue. The salmon industry now affords a revenue of close to $200,000 a year. Last year there was about $50,000 worth of fish shipped from Grants Pass, and Mr. Kelly believes it would be possible within ten years to have the fish output of Rogue river amount to fully $500,000 a year could there be ample protection afforded the salmon and proper fishways maintained at all dams placed in the river. The proper placing of the river does not appear to be attainable under the lax enforcement of the state laws, but it would be possible if the fishing interests were under the control of the general government, which enforces its regulations with a vigor not known to state authorities. Since the organization of the Rogue River Fishermen's union, with headquarters at Grants Pass, Mr. Kelly has been able to secure better co-operation from the fishermen, and now little fishing is done illegally. He has also succeeded in getting all the dams provided with fish ladders so the salmon have little difficulty in getting up the river.

16,000,000 EGGS EACH YEAR IN LINN COUNTY

ALBANY, Or., August 27.—Linn county exports an eighth of a million dollars' worth of eggs annually. In the past fiscal year local shippers sent 670,000 dozens to the markets of the north-west. The business is growing rapidly and ere long a cackling hen will of right adorn the industrial escutcheon of Linn county. This county's colossal shipment of 8,040,000 eggs in the past year would make an omelet for all of the people residing in the states west of the Rocky mountains. All of the inhabitants of St. Louis, Baltimore, Cleveland, Buffalo, San Francisco, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, San Orleans, Detroit, Milwaukee and Washington, D. C., combined could sit down to breakfast together and each have two fried eggs from Linn county's shipment in the past 12 months. If placed end to end the 8,040,000 eggs forming this record-breaking shipment would reach across the state of Oregon from north to south. Nor do the figures include the eggs consumed at home or sold in local markets. They represent only those which have actually been shipped to outside markets. Estimating that the 25,000 people of Linn county eat at least 8,000,000 eggs in a year, it is seen that Linn county hens must have laid more than 16,000,000 eggs during the past 12 months.
