

SPOKANE PLANS BIG APPLE FAIR

Many Growers in Northwest Will Enter Exhibits and Try For Prizes

Spokane is making great preparations for a national apple show to be given in December. The men in charge are meeting with great success in inducing growers to enter the competition for awards.

E. L. Stewart, former president of the Washington State Horticultural association, writes as follows to the secretary of the apple show in reply to a request for an exhibit:

"Replying to your favor of the 26th ult., I will certainly enter the contest with a carload of apples. It seems to me that this is a grand opportunity for the different apple districts of the northwest to show their faith in their claims of growing superior apples."

"I think the matter should be brought to the attention of the commercial clubs of the different districts, with a view of their taking the matter up and getting the best equipped grower in each district to enter the competition."

"It is certainly the best opportunity the west has ever had of showing to the east that we are really growing choice apples on a commercial scale, and at the same time convince them that we lead the world in our grade and pack."

"I would prefer to be in the competition with 25 competitors rather than only two or three, and if it could be known early enough how many cars would be entered it could be arranged to have an auction sale of the exhibits in this class on the last day of the show, and the buyers could find their purchases in the market in time for the holiday trade. I believe this could be worked up to be the most important feature of the show, and as the apples would all be known as the 'cream of the northwest,' a fancy they would sell at prices never before heard of in any country."

"The parties making exhibits in this class are running no risk whatever, for if they put up meritorious fruit in food shapes, it is certain to sell at a price to more than repay the extra expense of making the exhibit, without taking the prize money into consideration at all."

"The competition cannot fail to do a vast amount of good to the whole country, for it should bring out the very best material, the best ideas and workmanship in grade and pack, and in this way show thousands of visitors the very best methods known."

"I know that personally I want to find the man that beats me out, for when I do I am sure to learn something that I can profit by."

REPUBLICANS NAME LILLEY IN CONNECTICUT

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 9.—Congressman George H. Lilley, instigator of the famous submarine boat investigation by congress last winter, was nominated for governor by the republican convention today. The vote stood: Lilley 402, Lieutenant H. Lake 51 and Governor Woodruff 42.

The distinct victory for Lilley is taken as the stamp of approval by the party in this state of his fight in congress, which proved unsuccessful, and for which he was severely criticized in many quarters.

Gans-Nelson Bout

Round 8—They rushed right into a clinch. Joe planted Bat with two wicked right uppercuts. They clinched, fighting hard for body. Nelson hit Joe on mouth with his forearm. They riddled around in a 20-second clinch. Gans seems willing to hold on with the Battler. Gans got there with right uppercut that lifted the Battler off his feet. They clinched and fought for the body again. Gans caught the Dane a hard right and left hook to jaw. Nelson got there with hard right and left to the body. They were clinched at the end. Even round.

Between rounds Referee Smith cautioned Nelson about hitting with his forearm.

Round 9—Obeying his second's orders, Nelson fought in close, and after taking right and left on jaw, Bat chopped Gans with hard right to face. They exchanged lefts to body, both landed right uppercuts in a clinch. Nelson put three stiff lefts to body. Gans jarred Nelson with two right uppercuts in clinch. They were still clinched when the gong rang. Even round.

It was remarked after the ninth round that Gans was fighting much better than the last time.

Round 10—Nelson took a right on body and right on jaw as the round opened. They clinched, Nelson fighting for body with left. Nelson tattooed Joe's body with light rights. They mauled each other head to head for a full quarter of a round. Gans whipped stiff left to body. Nelson again hit Gans on face with forearm. He jolted Joe with light left uppercut in clinch. Joe whipped hard left and right to body. Again Nelson hit Joe on mouth with forearm. The crowd booed Nelson. As the bell rang they stood and looked at each other, Nelson glaring at Joe, smiling confidently. Even round.

Round 11—Nelson ran over into a clinch. Bat hooked Joe on ear with right Joe's right eye, which had been battered early in the fight, started to close. They clinched, the crowd shouting as the Battler landed a low punch, although Bat tried with both hands, he couldn't land. Joe put right hard to jaw. Nelson copped Joe on mouth with left. Gans ducked hard right and left swings. They exchanged right-hand hooks and in the open fighting Gans landed the harder blows. They were fighting in a clinch at the bell. Nelson had Gans very tired. Nelson was stronger than Gans at the end of this round.

Round 12—The Dane tore right after Joe as in the former rounds and they clinched. Joe put right and left to face. Nelson tried with left in a prolonged clinch without effort. Joe got thorough with hard right to body and hard left to chin. Nelson peppered Joe's body and chin with left in clinch. Gans missed right hook. Bat startled Gans with a left to chin. Gans caught Bat with two light uppercuts and jarred him with left, but could not daze the Dane. Nelson swung himself out of position and Gans walloped him right square on the jaw with his right. The Dane was not fazed. The bell rang, Nelson's round.

Round 13—They rushed into a clinch, Nelson intent on fighting close. Gans sent in two jarring rights to face and two lefts to body. They looked heads again, Nelson playing for body with left. Gans chopped him with right uppercut. Again their heads were locked. Gans appears very tired in this round, not seeming to wish to waste his strength by hitting. He wobbled the Dane with two right-hand smashes to the jaw and two hard rights to body. The crowd cheered and Joe smiled through the blood. Nelson roughed Gans about the ring, pushing Joe's head back with left. For once they were fighting in the open with the bell ringing. Gans' round.

Round 14—They went right into the same old clinch, Nelson putting his head against Joe's chin and keeping it there as he played for Joe's body. Joe put in two or three jarring uppercuts with right and cleverly avoided Bat's left swing. They broke and clinched again, Gans putting hard right to body. Coming out of a clinch, they exchanged right crosses. Joe ducked Nelson's right and left swings. They exchanged right uppercuts with the bell and both smiled. Even round.

Round 15—Gans looked tired coming up for this round. The Dane came after him with hard left handed body punches, but received uppercut and jarring right on body for his pains. They jolted each other with rights in a clinch, with hands even. Joe cracked the Battler two fearful slams on the jaw, cutting the Dane's mouth wide open. Both their mouths were bleeding in this round. They clinch and exchange rights to jaw. Both were covered with blood. In a clinch Gans pecked away at Nelson's sore mouth. Gans ducked Nelson's left swing. Gans looked very tired and was leaning on Nelson at the bell. Both went to their corners all blood. Although it was Gans' round, Nelson is the stronger.

Nelson won the fight in the twenty-first round.

Why I Am What I Am.

No doubt you often wonder why some of your religious and irreligious neighbors believe and worship as they do. I have often found ourselves asking why do people believe as they do? It is a pertinent thought, as so many people differ religiously and irreligiously.

The pastor of the Christian church is interviewing editors, teachers, doctors, lawyers, business men, preachers, etc., with a view to finding out why they are what they are.

Answers will be read from the pulpit next Sunday night. No doubt this will be helpful and interesting to everyone. The pastor will tell why he is what he is. Bridge your neighbors.
