

JOHNSON TO MEET BURNS

Big Pugilistic Event Scheduled For Australia--Ketchel Got Another Chance

LONDON, Sept. 11.—It was learned here today that Tommy Burns and Jack Johnson have been matched to fight at Sydney, Australia, the latter part of November. It is understood that a syndicate of Australians will finance the fight, giving a purse of $25,000, winner take 60 per cent and the loser 40 per cent. The advices received here today state that the preliminary arrangements have all been made and that the match is a certainty. The general opinion among fight fans here is that Burns will be whipped by the negro. The announcement of the proposed fight was carried in the dispatches two weeks ago, but today's dispatches confirm the story that Burns has at last been forced to accept the match with the negro. It is understood that preliminary arrangements are being made in London.

Ketchell to Meet Papke. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 11.—The fight fans here today were surprised to learn that Stanley Ketchell will be given another chance to regain his lost championship laurels by Billy Papke. Papke signed with Ketchell last night, Joe O'Connor acting for Ketchell and Tom Jones for Papke. Jack Gleason has secured the match, which is to be pulled off Thanksgiving day at the Coliseum. The men will fight under the same weight conditions that governed their last battle and will receive 50 per cent of the proceeds, 40 per cent to go to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser. The referee is to be selected 15 days before the fight. O'Connor left for Los Angeles today to bring Ketchell here. He says that Ketchell had taken on too many fights and was stale. He feels confident that the Michigan youngster will be able to regain the middle-weight championship November 25. Papke has a theatrical engagement here next week and will then leave for Chicago, where he will stay until with in three weeks of the fight, when he will come west to train.

LUDWIG THE LUNATIC

Patti Once Threw Him Into a Frenzy of Madness.

A FREAK OF THE CRAZY KING.

He Frightened and Enraged the Great Diva by His Strange Whims, and When She Finally Sang For Him in Munich It Drove Him Wild.

When Patti was in the first heyday of her fame Ludwig II, the mad king of Bavaria, set his heart on having her sing for him at his private auditorium in Munich. He wrote her after letter, begging, imploring, offering extravagant sums of money, but Patti resolutely refused to go. She had heard too many stories of Ludwig's freaks and was desperately afraid of him, but at last the king offered her a sum so enormous that it seemed ridiculous to refuse it. Then the singer plucked up courage and started for Munich. When she and her maid alighted at the station not even a carriage was there to meet them, and they had to inquire the name of the best hotel and call a cab. That was the first shock to the diva's nerves and temper. After luncheon she started out to see the town and incidentally to examine the posters announcing Europe's greatest singer. Not a mention of her name could she find. She rushed back to the hotel and told her maid to pack the trunks.

Just at that moment a respectful officer delivered a letter from the king. The letter stated curtly that his majesty would wait for her at 7 o'clock precisely in the royal palace, where his singer in ordinary, Mme. Fischer, would give her further directions. Mme. Fischer would also sing with Patti. Patti the diva which his majesty wished to hear. A programme was enclosed. Patti wept with rage.

"I have never been treated so brutally," she said. "I shall leave at once. Tell the king so. I will not sing—never, never, never." The officer pleaded with the late prima donna. His majesty had been wild with excitement ever since he knew she would come and had not slept for three nights, so great was his joy at the prospect of hearing her.

"Besides," added the officer, "you know your king is—is—is—"

"Crazy," snapped Patti. "Yes, that's very comforting, but it's I don't know why I ever came." Just then she caught sight of this poster: "The king commands Mme. Patti to appear in pure white, without any color whatever, and not by any means to wear a satin gown, but soft wool silk is preferred to his majesty."

"His majesty will have to be pitied. I have no white woolen gown excepting polonaise. I shall wear red velvet."

"Red!" groaned the officer. "Oh, no, no! Red sends his majesty into fits. If you appear in red, he will scream and have convulsions. Oh, do be patient, madame! I will bring Mme. Fischer to you. She understands the king's nerves. She will explain."

He fled from the room, and shortly after Mme. Fischer appeared upon the scene. She soothed Patti into good humor and also attacked the white wool polonaise and transformed it into a most becoming Greek robe.

Before 7 the royal carriage arrived at the hotel and Patti went to the palace. She was led through dimly lighted rooms and corridors into Ludwig's private theater, which was in utter darkness save for the moonlight that entered through the windows. Patti stood upon the dark stage, while an orchestra, somewhere out of sight, began a soft prelude. Through the gloom she could just make out a white face in the royal box opposite the stage. Not another auditor was in the great hall.

Patti felt the cold shivers creeping over her. She shook with nervousness and fear, and when she should have begun her aria not a sound could she make. She opened her mouth, but her throat was paralyzed from nervous terror. There was a pause. The king sprang up and leaned forward out of the box, his white face gleaming in the moonlight. The violins repeated the prelude. Patti violated herself together and made one heroic effort. Her voice rang out into the great empty place, and the king sank back into the dark box.

Patti, though badly scared, made the effort of her life and finished the aria from "La Traviata" triumphantly and stood flushed with victory. Dead silence. Not a sound came from the gloom before her. She went off the stage in a temper. Mme. Fischer was behind the scenes, and Patti waited with her for the signal to sing the next number. A messenger appeared at the door. His majesty had had enough music and had gone to his apartments. For a moment Patti stood stunned. Then she laughed. The rudeness was so colossal that it was funny. Mme. Fischer took the diva to supper and then home.

The next morning Mme. Fischer called at the hotel once more, accompanied by the court chamberlain, who bore the promised check, an autograph letter of thanks from the king and some jewels of great value. King Ludwig, Mme. Fischer said, was in one of his maddest moods, wild with regret, cursing himself and cursing Patti. He had walked the floor all night, groaning that he was a traitor, for Patti's voice had so ravished his senses that for one moment he had gone over to Italian music and had been false to Wagner, the one musician who alone had satisfied his majesty's soul.

"That was better than having bored him," added Patti, shrugging her shoulders.
