NO TEST FOR COL. STEWART

Dreyfus of American Army Ordered Back Into Exile Without Riding Test

HUACHUCA, Ariz., Sept. 14.—Ordered today back into exile at Fort Grant, Colonel William F. Stewart, the Dreyfus of the American army, will not be allowed to make the 90-mile test ride recently prescribed for him by the war department. No reason has been assigned for the change in plans. A terse order, mailed from the headquarters of General Thomas at Denver, September 12, was received commanding the colonel to report for duty at Fort Grant, the lonely post to which he was exiled a year ago, when he first fell under the ban of the department's disapproval.

When seen today Colonel Stewart said he would take the train from here Wednesday morning and go to Wilcox, Ariz., where he will be met by his companions in exile, a colored cook and William Nail, an ex-soldier, who will drive with him to the force.

The colonel, it is stated, was ordered back to the post without taking the test because the statement of the army surgeons that he was suffering from heart trouble and the sight was gone from one of his eyes.

Colonel Stewart will resist retirement before he reaches the age limit. He declares that he can prove himself fit for service if given a court martial and that he will never surrender until he is given a hearing. He has applied for court martial three times, and his wife has made an appeal to the department, but nothing has been done.

The colonel is anxious that his court martial be ordered soon, as the men he wishes to call as witnesses in his behalf are growing old and death may interfere with his plans. Acting on the advice of friends, Colonel Stewart today declared that he wouldn't accept a furlough of four months, to which he is entitled. He said that he would serve continuously until he reached the age limit unless forced by illness in his family to ask for a leave of absence.
