SERVANTS' SIGN LANGUAGE.

Peculiarities of Employers and Tourists Noted by Marks.

Servants and hotel porters in many cities of Europe have a sign language as complete as that of the American tramp.

"It is not generally known," said a courier, "that servants are in the habit of giving useful tips to their employers and to the man who delivers the groceries and meat by marks on the back door or apartments, such as Americans like to take for the season, the back door is liberally covered with barely perceptible signs which nobody but the initiated can understand.

"A freshly engaged domestic knows exactly what to expect, whether his masters are easy or hard to please, whether it is 'monseur' or 'madame' who is hard to get along with. Other signs tell whether the food is good or bad, whether the work is difficult or not, etc.

"The boy from the grocer's or the baker's or the butcher's will also be informed whether he can expect a big tip or not.

"The system is even more developed among hotel servants. A family arriving from Italy, after having refused to give what some Italian porter considered a sufficient tip, will have the fact advertised in every hotel he visits in Switzerland or France. A little mark on the trunk is all that is needed."—Philadelphia Ledger.

AMERICAN FRENCH.

The Struggles of a New Yorker in a Paris Restaurant.

He gazed complacently at the gay labels on his trunk. "Fanny how you hear in Paris!" so he confirmed his reminiscences of travel. "For this American recent struggling with the sonorous French tongue. You hear queer mistakes, too—no end of 'em. The queerest I came across was made by a New York man.

"This tourist at the Chatham wanted to say, 'I am hungry.' He should have said, 'J'ai faim.' Then the waiter would have brought him a meat at once. What he did say was:

"'Je suis fameux, garçon.' He said there, 'I'm famous, waiter.' And the waiter, impressed, bowed and smiled. 'Congratulations, sir.'

"No food came. He must have made an error, so he tried again:

"'Garçon, j'ai une femme.' That meant he had a wife. The waiter said he was sure she was a winner.

"'Rather red now, he took a third dive:

"'Je suis femme.' This time the New Yorker said he was a woman.

"'And madam dresses in this way for comfort's sake?' the waiter inquired, with a gallant smile.—New York Press.
