LIGHTNING REVELS

MRS. GUNNESS ALIVE

LA PORTE, Ind., Nov. 17.—Statements corroborative of the appearance of Mrs. Belle Gunness in the flesh long after she was supposed to have been burned with some of her many victims, was given today by Frederick Lambright, a local trammer, who is to testify in the trial of Roy Lamphere on the charge of murdering the notorious woman.

According to Lambright, he was sure he saw Mrs. Gunness since the fire of April 28, the date being about the middle of July. The witness told a vivid story. He was driving in a night thunderstorm, he said, from the home of William Humphrey, his Laporte, the road leading past the Gunness farm. As he reached the farm gate a carriage bounded out of the darkness, and turned in toward "Murder hill." Just then a flash of lightning revealed the occupants of the vehicle.

"One of the faces," said Lambright, "was that of Mrs. Gunness. The other was that of a man I never saw before or since until three days ago on Main street. I saw either that man or his twin brother. The woman was unveiled that night and wore a deep black veil."

MILLION YOUNG TROUT

EACH YEAR FOR ROGUE

A million young trout each year to restock the Rogue river and tributaries is one of the main objects of the newly organized Fish Protective association. These young fish can be secured from the government upon application and through Senator Jonathan Bourne, who is on the senate committee on fisheries.

"We estimate that it will take at least a million young trout a year for some years to replenish the supply," states Dr. Louis Bundy, secretary-treasurer of the association. "To restock the streams is as important as our work in protecting the fish after we get them. Of the million fry, half will be turned loose in the Rogue, the other half in Big Butte, Little Butte, the Applegate and other streams.

"Steelhead and rainbow are the varieties wanted in the Rogue. Cutthroat, black spotted and eastern brook trout are needed for the smaller streams. It does not cost much money to secure the young fish, but it devolves upon us to pay for their transportation from the railroads and for planting them in the various streams. This is what the membership dues in the association are for.

"In Sunday's Oregonian is a full page write-up of fishing in the Rogue, with illustrations. These articles are the best advertising this region can have, but what is the use of bringing people here to fish if there are no fish to catch? They are disappointed and go away knocking the region. If we can protect the fish and restock the streams we will have hundreds of people coming here annually just for the fishing. Therefore, everybody should join the Protective association."

HARBOR POLICE LOOKING

FOR BOYS WHO ARE LOST

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 17.—The harbor police today failed to find trace of four boys who were reported to have been lost on the bay since yesterday afternoon. The police patrol boat has been searching all night, but owing to the fog has been unable to find either the lads or the skiff in which they embarked. It is believed that they drifted beyond the bayside or were captured. The missing youths are George Langridge, 12 years; Joseph Mark, 15; Frank Costello, 17, and Charles Young, 15. The boys took a flat-bottomed skiff from the boat of the Dolphin boat club. When they failed to return last night, the parents notified the police and a search was started.

NAT GOODWIN COMES

ONCE MORE INTO HIS OWN

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 17.—Nat Goodwin is hailed today as the author of a new role which he presented last night in "Cameo Kirby," a new play by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, dealing with a Mississippi river romance. Goodwin played the role with a dash that made a decided hit, portraying the character of a care-free gambler. He was supported by Maudie Pealey, his new leading lady. Mrs. Goodwin, formerly Edna Goodrich, sat in box and joined in the ovation given her husband.

THANKSGIVING SALE

HAVE YOU THOUGHT ABOUT WHAT IT MEANS?

After a store has been running for over a year and you have bought goods and found out that their regular prices are as low and in some instances lower than any other store, and that their goods prove satisfactory, and when not right they are made right as soon as reported, don't you feel that you have found a safe place to trade? Now one thing more—when that store starts a sale and reduces prices, when all others are holding up for the long profits, don't you think it is a good time to investigate the new store?
