TO DISCUSS POLLENIZATION

Professor O'Gara to Explain Why a Spitzenberg Tree Bears Falsely

(By Charles Meserve.)

Just why a Spitzenberg tree should one year bear apples true to type and perfect in color and size and then the very next year have a crop that is off in color and shape and in type bear more of a resemblance to a Ben Davis or other variety than to its own type is one of the perplexing problems that the beginner in fruitgrowing has to meet. And this perplexing difficulty is an expensive one to the orchardist, for instead of having fancy Spitzenbergs to sell he will have a lot of non-true apples that cannot be classed with any variety known to the market. This difficulty besets all varieties of apples but it is more noticeable on red than on yellow varieties.

Frankish Fruit Habits

This apparently freakish habit of the apple tree has been attributed by many growers to an effect of weather or other conditions. But the observant orchardist has found that this striking variety of fruit on one tree is due to the crossing of the pollen of two varieties of apples, thereby producing a hybrid having characteristics of both parents, just as a mulatto bears a resemblance to both his white and black parents.

Cross pollenization of fruits will be the subject for consideration at a special meeting of the Jackson County horticultural society to be held at the commercial club room in Medford on Saturday, November 28, at 2 p. m. On the invitation of the society Professor P. J. O'Hara from the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C., will give an address at this meeting on the pollenization of fruits. Professor O'Gara is one of the leading authorities of the United States on all problems connected with fruitgrowing and his address will contain all the facts that are known in the science of cross-pollenization.

Effect of Pollenization

Little or no attention has heretofore been given in Rogue River valley in planting orchards to the effect that pollenization has on increasing the productivity of the trees, or of the effect that cross-pollenization has on producing true or false types of fruit. Some orchards have been planted in a solid block of one variety, while others have been planted in a series of blocks of varieties. And there are orchards that have been planted with reference to the effect of pollenization. These orchards being planted in alternate series of rows, each series of a different variety and the orchard containing two or more varieties.

And some varieties of pears require cross-pollenization quite as much as do some varieties of apples. An instance in this line is a five-acre pear orchard in this valley that, though the trees are 16 years old, healthy and vigorous, yet in no year since the trees have been blighted enough fruit to pay for cultivating the land. Had there been other pears that are strong pollenizers interspersed in this orchard at the time of planting it would now be producing each year a crop of pears worth not less than $5000, but as it is the orchard is a loss to the owner.

Fruitmen Should Attend

This meeting of the Jackson County horticultural society is open to the public and all who are interested in the development of the fruit industry in Rogue River valley are cordially invited to attend. To those who are planting an orchard, and who are not versed in the science of fruitgrowing the knowledge to be gained at this meeting from the address of Professor O'Gara will make possible that their orchards shall be wealth producers instead of a losing venture. Owing to the days being short and many of the fruitgrowers, who will attend, living at some distance from Medford, the meeting will be convened promptly at 2 p. m. So all should bear this fact in mind and not be late and miss a part of the address.

Dire distress, diabetes, Bright's disease.

A. W. Mountrayman, living corner F and Tenth streets, Medford, Or., says: "I was bothered with my kidneys for a long time, and experienced all kinds of suffering. I was very irritable and was unable to see the bright side of life. My kidneys were very irregular in action and annoyed me greatly. I doctored a great deal, but did not find any relief until at last I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procured a box at Haskins' drug store. I used them as directed and in a short time they proved to be the remedy I needed. My system was toned up, the pains and ache relieved, and my health returned. I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to others."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
