ROOSEVELT WOULD HAVE THE NAVY REORGANIZED

WASHINGTON Dec. 21 .- Presider plan for the appointment of a special commission to reorganize the may department by eliminating the bureau system. He finds that the enlargements of the membership of the general board which Secretary Newberry accomplished upon assuming his duties on December 1, and the appointment of Herbert L. Satterlee, the well known exponent of the president's navni theories, as assistant secretary of the navy, have fallen short of effecting the reforms which the three men had in mind. Because of what he considers to be plan for the appointment of a special

Because of what he considers to be the pressing necessity for reorganization, and undismayed by the intimation that congress will not pass any such measure before the conclusion of his term of office. President Roosevik is again sounding leading naval experts with a view of securing their co-opera-

"Old Hoss" Radbourne, Greatest of All Pitchers.

THE HERCULES OF THE GAME

His Marvelous Feat of Pluck, Strength and Endurance That Won the Pennant For Providence In 1884-A Record in Games Won.

Pitchers may come and pitchers may go, but the name of "Old Hoss" Rad-bourne goes on forever. I have talked to many great ball players who have lamented to me the fact that baseball fame is so ephemeral that it was not worth the gaining, and, while no doubt this is in a great measure true, there is one pitcher who has left a name that promises to roll on for many, many years.

Each year hundreds of pitchers claim attention of the world, and each year they are promptly forgotten. But Illinois produced a man who, although now years deceased, has a brighter now years deceased, has a brighter name than any of the great multitude. In the great campaign of 1884, when the Providence club, then a member of the National league, was fighting a bitter game with Philadelphia, a catastrophe occurred that seemingly would disrupt its chances of whating the pennant. A player named Sweeney, who was pitching was ordered to go into right field to change places with "Cyclone" Miller. At that time it was not permissible to take a pitcher out of the game. Whereupon Sweeney promptly walked out of the game, leaving the team with only eight men and with one pitcher, Charles Radbourne.

Two men tried to cover the field, with the result that Providence was with the result that Providence was completely snowed under. A meeting of the directors was held to decide of the directors was held to decide whether or not the club should be disbanded. Certainly a professional team was never in a sorrier plight.

Radbourne was approached and the proposition put to him. "I can win it all right," said be quietly and in a matter of fact tone.

And then followed the most remark-able battle for a pennant that the world has ever seen. Radbourne es-tablished a record that has nover been tablished a record that has never been equaled, one that will live when more expensive contests will have been bilastfully forgotten. Of twenty-seven consecutive games Radbourne won twenty-six. In four games with Boston he had three shutouts, only one run was scored and only seventeen hits were made. This defeat was suffered at the hands of Buffalo by a score of 2 to 0, and even then only five hits were made off him, showing that the defeat was not due to poor pitching. Needless to say, Providence won the pennant, or, rather, Radbourne won the pennant.

But the great player had to pay the price. No arm could stand the awful price. No arm could stand the awful strain without great agony. Morning after morning when Radbourne arose he could not lift his arm as high as he could not lift his arm as high as his waist. He had to brush his hair with his left hand. But he did not give up the game. He would slip out to the park about two hours before the rest of the team put in an appearance and would begin the excruciating process of limbering up. He would pitch the ball only a few feet when he would first go out, but he would keep on trying time after time, rubbing his arm with his left hand. rubbing his arm with his left hand. Sometimes his face would be drawn up into contortions, but never a word of complaint left his lips.

Half an hour before the game was to begin the players would slip out to see how "Old Hoss" was getting mone They would sit silently on the benefit waiting for his arm to get into could tion. When he was able to the working from second to home hase a rousing cheer would go up for the cheer would go up the cheer would go up for the cheer would go up for the cheer would go up for the cheer would go up the cheer wo cheer would go up, for they knew that meant the winning of the game for them. Radbourne claimed for his home
