Getting an "Old Man."
"Speaking of new men," said the boss of the skyscraper builders, with a twinkle, "comical things happen even up here, the same as in a theater. Sometimes in rush seasons there ain't enough hands to go round, and we have to take 'em green as the hills. I had one once, a kid from Vermont, a whale of a kid, with bones like a horse and eyes awful anxious to please—eyes that made you like him. He's one of the best men I've got now, but then he was green as God made him." The foreman stopped to chuckle.

"Go up to the eighteenth floor," I told him one day, "and bring down an old man." I was busy at the time, and when I saw the kid stare I said kind of sharp that if that old man wasn't here in five minutes the whole blamed building would probably go to smash. This was just my way of making him bustle, but he thought I meant it word for word. He went up on the run, and in a few minutes he came down with a spitting, clawing old feller hold like a vise in his arms.

"He was the only old man on the floor," said the kid, "and he wanted to stop and argue about it, but from what you said I knew what it meant, so I just grabbed him and came."

"You see," the foreman added kindly, noting my puzzled expression, "an old man happens to be the name of a tool we use."—Everybody's Magazine

Making Caricatures.
The way in which some artists can distort features without making them unrecognizable is certainly very remarkable. Thomas Nast possessed this faculty to an extraordinary degree, and he had a very peculiar way of adding new faces to his mental photograph gallery. When a fresh subject would arise in politics, for instance, he would invent some protest to call upon him at his office or lounge and hold him in conversation as long as possible, studying his features. When he took his departure he would purposely leave his cane. Once outside, Nast would make a hasty pencil sketch on a card and would usually find that his memory was deficient as to some detail. He would then return, ostensibly for the cane, and another look at the victim would enable him to perfect his sketch. After that he had the man forever. When Joe Keppler was alive he used to make frequent trips to Washington for the purpose of seeing statesmen whom he wanted to draw. He was very clever at catching likenesses and scarcely ever referred to a photograph.

A Wonderful Bird.
One day a wonderful bird tapped at the window of Mrs. Nansen's wife of the famous arctic explorer, home at Christiania. Instantly the window was opened, and in another moment she covered the little messenger with kisses and caresses. The carrier pigeon had been away from the cottage thirty long months, but it had not forgotten the way home. It brought a note from Nansen, stating that all was going well with him and his expedition in the polar region. Nansen had fastened a message to the bird and carried it home. The first courier dashed out into the blizzardly air. It flew like an arrow over a thousand miles of frozen waste and then sped forward over another thousand miles of ocean past plains and forests and one morning entered the window of the waiting mistress and delivered the message which she had been awaiting so anxiously.

Would Let Folks Know It.
Somebody sent this to the society editor and made affidavit that it really happened.

Here it is: They were out at an afternoon card party. A stout woman dropped a card to the floor. "Would you be so kind as to pick up that card for me?" she inquired of the little woman at her right.

"Certainly," said the accommodating woman at the right, picking up the card.

"You see," explained the stout woman apologetically, "I've got on a brand new fifty dollar corset, and I'm afraid I'll strain it if I lean over."

"Hum!" commented the other woman enthusiastically. "If I had a fifty dollar corset I'd wear it on the outside. I really would."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Crazy.
"We find the prisoner not guilty by reason of insanity."

"But the plea was not that of insanity," remarked the court.

"That's just the point we made," rejoined the foreman. "We decided that any man who didn't have sense enough to know that an insanity plea was the proper one must be crazy."—Philadelphia Ledger.

He Was Sensitive.
Hobbs: "You're pretty much struck on Miss Gibbs, aren't you, old man?"
Hobbs: "I was once, but after what she said to me last night I'm not going to pay any more attention to her."
Hobbs: "No! What did she say?"
Hobbs: "She said: 'What did she say?'"—Cleveland Leader.

Freshman Mathematics.
Freshie: "Professor, is it ever possible to take the greater from the less?"
"There is a pretty close approach to it when the concept is taken out of a freshman."—Jewish Ledger.

Over and Under.
"Archie is fairly going crazy over his new motor."

"That's strange. Every time I've seen him he has been going crazy under it."

The trouble with many a man's integrity is that it needs constant vindication.—Chicago News.

Nothing.
"Nature plans well for mankind's needs."

"I should say so. What could be more confident than cars to look spectacles over?"—Washington Herald.

The Soft Answer.
He Aristotle said that five feet four is the ideal height for women. His teaching is a mistake. You know, I am five feet three. He's right. You are more than three, are you?"

BIG CONSERVATION CONGRESS IN SEATTLE

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 22.—The first conservation congress for all the north-western states ever held will take place in this city on August 10, 17 and 18. A call for the congress has just been issued by the Washington Conservation association, one of the strongest state organizations in the country. Arrangements have been made for the entertainment of 1909 delegates and the meetings will be held in the big Auditorium on the grounds of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition.

Through Acting Governor M. E. Hay the governors of all the states will be asked to be in attendance at the congress. Such men as Andrew Carnegie, Clifford Pinchot, Frederick Weyerhaeuser and others have already been extended invitations to participate in the congress and, according to C. H. Baily, secretary of the Conservation association, the convention will be the biggest thing of the kind ever held in the United States, saying that of the congress of governors called by the president a year ago.

The Washington Conservation association has engaged Ansel Curtis to go through the state and take a series of conservation photographs that, it is expected, will be second to none in the world. These will be exhibited in the exposition auditorium during the congress. The views will include forestry, fisheries, irrigation and other phases of conservation work, such as have heretofore never been assembled in the west.

Chambers of commerce, commercial clubs and other organizations in the state will be asked to name official delegates to attend the congress, and through Lieutenant Governor Hay the governors of the states will be asked to name delegates.

Enough electricity will be used in the decorative features of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition to supply all the needs of a city of 40,000 inhabitants.
