Glen Pleasant was a visitor at Talent Saturday.

The first and second teams played a game of ball here Sunday. The score was 13 to 19 in favor of the former.

The Dunlap orchard, laying two miles west of town, will produce a large crop this year. Every one of the cherry trees are loaded to the limit and these will be ready to pick the latter part of the week. The Spitzenberg apples and the figs are larger and better than they have ever been before at this time of the year. All varieties of pears are in fine shape and the yield will be heavy. Any person who is inclined to believe that the frost has created such havoc as has been reported would do well to visit this model orchard and see for himself. Among the many beautiful flowers and shrubs in Mr. Dunlap's dooryard, are the spineless Scotch thistle, and a Texas tree covered with flowers that botanists have never classified. Years ago rose bush graftings were made upon this tree and this the explanation of its peculiarity.

The Cubs were to have gone to Phoenix Sunday for a ball game, but were notified at the eleventh hour that there would be nothing doing. There is a splendid opening here for an attorney, especially a civil practitioner.

trouble. The pains through my back were so severe at times that I could hardly endure them. My kidneys were disordered and I had to arise many times during the night to pass the secretions. HAS MADE IT POSSIBLE TO CUT HAIR BY ELECTRICITY

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 1.—A test of an electrical appliance by means of which every man may cut his own hair, is slated today at the National Electrical Convention, Public Brown, of Chicago, the inventor of the apparatus, confesses he is not so sanguine as to the general usage into which the self-cutting hair machine may come, but rather contrived the device for his own amusement and to illustrate the extent to which electricity may be applied.

LINCOLN'S HOUSE.

An Occasion When He Did Not Recognize It at First Sight.

"Mrs. Lincoln played a good joke on her husband when he was practicing law and journeyed about from court to court on horseback," says Major Bittinger. "Those trips often took several weeks at a time.

"On one of these trips Lincoln was gone for about four weeks. He returned late one night. Stopping his horse, he dismounted at the usual place. He turned to go into the house and then stopped. Although he was a man of temperance, he thought he must have been imbibing on the way some time that day, for before him stood a building he had never seen before. He thought it over for a minute and then went across the street and knocked at a friend's door. They were in bed, and some one sang out:

"Who is it?"

"Abe Lincoln," was the reply. "I've been looking for my house. Can you tell me where it is? Guess I must have been lost. I thought it was just across the way. When I went away the building was one story high, and now it is two."

"It was explained to him that during his absence Mrs. Lincoln had added another story. He laughed and went back to the strange house."

He used to tell the joke on himself many times, according to the major.—National Magazine.

CONTINUOUS SHOWS.

They Were Started by B. F. Keith in a Boston Store.

It was in the month of January, 1883, that Mr. B. F. Keith, who had been studying the show business with far-seeing eyes for many years, presented, in a store that he had leased in Boston, the first continuous show ever seen on any stage. He paid his performers $30 a week for a single turn and $40 for double and required them to give eight or nine turns a day. His "top liner" or chief attraction was a pound and a half baby. The doors of his playhouse were thrown open at noon, and from that time until half past 10 at night the performance went on without interruption.

Patrons were allowed to spend the entire day in the theater, and at first so many availed themselves of this opportunity to get a substantial filling of amusement at a small cost that Mr. Keith realized that he must either abandon the idea of a continuous entertainment or else invent some method by which the audience could be driven out of the building and place made for those outside who were waiting for admittance. Necessity was the mother of invention, especially when it is mated with sharp Yankee wit, and it was thus that what is known as "the chaser" came into the world.—James L. Ford in McClure's Magazine.

A Ghost in a Clock.

Basingstoke provides a remarkable story of a ghost in the form of a clock. At the approach of midnight each night the otherwise peaceful "grandfather" becomes inhabited by a spook. The ticking changes into a deep and peculiar thumping, the clock increases in stature, while a pair of gray feet protrude from beneath its base. Passing through transitional stages the thumping is replaced by a spasmodic breathing, and upon the stroke of 12 the pendulum door opens, revealing an enormous ashy gray hand with mal-shaped fingers. The clock face disappears, displaying a frightful gray head, large and round, with abnormally long, pale blue eyes. Beyond a quiet stroll, which causes weird tapplings along the landings during the night, the apparition is inoffensive and is said to prove of great service in sending every one early to bed.—London Tit-Bits.

One View of Saving.

Ik Marvel, author of the "Reveries of a Bachelor," was all his life opposed to the modern commercial spirit. A young disciple from the west once visited the aged writer in his New England home. The youth, a poet, said he thought he would put away his verses and write magazine love stories, so as to be able to save money.

But Mr. Mitchell frowned and shook his head.

"Saving," he said, "is the mania for depriving yourself of things which you want now for fear you may not have things which you won't possibly want forty years hence."

Francs and Dollars.

We like to read French stories, but every time francs are mentioned we stop to turn them into dollars. "She had 17,000 francs per year in the funds," the story will say, whereupon we stop to divide seventeen by five—to turn the francs into dollars and find out how much money this heroine had.—Acheson Globe.

Hoax—I can always tell a woman who takes things because they look cheap. Hoax—How? Hoax—Simply by looking at her husband.—Philadelphia Record.

Count art by gold and it fetters the feet it once winged.—Ouida.
