ROGUE RIVER ORCHARD LIFE.

its rewards are so great that it is very alluring to men of intelligence. As a recent writer says: "Whoever enters this field of production must understand that if he succeeds he will have full use for his best intellectual and physical energies." The Rogue river valley is as regular in its crop production as any part of the known world, and one can be certain that he will not have labored in vain if he concentrates his efforts on the right varieties of fruits on the right kind of land here.

Will the earning period of your life close in ten years hence? Are there boys and girls coming on who will be in the market for a collegiate education about that time? Set out or buy a small orchard in the Rogue river valley now, and when the time of need is at hand it will provide an annuity which none of the insurance or guaranty companies will care to duplicate. It is a pleasant occupation, in a sense carrying one back to Eden.

Overproduction Impossible.

There is no danger of overproduction. The apple and pear crop of the United States is less than it was 20 years ago. It was a third last year of what it was in 1896. As George Rae of Rae & Hatfield of New York City, former manager of Porter Bros., and the largest firm dealing in western fruit, states:

"The finest fruit in the United States, without exception, is produced in the Rogue river valley. Medford pears are unsurpassed. Some years ago I thought that with the constant planting of new orchards there would be an overproduction, and the fruit could not be marketed at a profit. Experience, however, proves that there is no such thing as an overproduction of high quality fruit, such as is produced about Medford. With the increase of the country in population and wealth has come also an increase in the demand for fancy fruit, and only a few places grow it. The demand exceeds the supply.

"The east cannot produce the quality of apples and pears grown in the Rogue river valley. Wherever your fruits are offered the highest prices are paid, and it is always in demand at fancy prices."

The Bridle is Off

One more week tells the tale. That week will go down in the history of our store as the busiest week this store has ever had. Every short lot in this entire store shall and must go during this week, whether it is a Ladies' Suit, a Ladies' Skirt, Ladies' Muslin Wear, Ladies' Waists or piece goods of any description; it makes no difference what it is, must be closed out entirely by Monday, June the 14th. The fact that we have so many odds and ends, so many short lots, in many lines, speaks eloquently in their favor. Had they not sold well, they would not be short lots.

Look at our show windows Tuesday, MATCH THE VALUES if you can; you will find a herculean task on your hands. We will stand by every garment and price quoted in our windows. This week shall be a veritable BEEHIVE at our store, and values you never dreamed of will stare you in the face. We want you to come specially Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock; there will be something doing.
