 BUD: "But, Annie, mother is now using Folger's Golden Gate, and it's so good I am sure another cup wouldn't do any harm."

TAFT ARRANGING WESTERN TRIP

Economy Is Watchword of Preparations Which Are Tentative Unless Congress Gives Money.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Plans for President Taft's transcontinental trip are being made by a number of government officials in and out of the White House. Until congress passes the bill appropriating $25,000 for the executive's traveling expenses for the first fiscal year, however, these plans will be only of a tentative nature; indeed, it may be said that until the lawmakers "come across" with the money, the president will not even admit that he will make the trip at all.

"I'm not going to pay my own expenses out there, that is certain," he repeats, and even the congressmen who are planning to vote against the bill whenever it makes its appearance, say they do not blame him for making that stand. He believes the people of the country will be the gainers by his journey and he sees no valid reason why he should foot the travel bill personally.

If the president goes west he will establish a record for economical traveling that has never been approached by any occupant of the White House. He will make the trip with his eye on the expense account all the way, and will not have a special train. In fact, if he could proceed from here to the coast and back again in half an hour, he would not even go to the expense of chartering a private car, but would wire ahead for "a lower berth away from the wheels" at every stop of the journey.

When the subject of the coast to coast trip was first considered by the president two or three months ago, the railroad men, who were asked to give an estimate of the expense involved if a special train was used all the way, figured that it would cost at least $17,000. So that now every time the subject of a special train is brought to the attention of Secretary Carpenter he turns pale.

Mr. Taft will be the fourth president to make a tour of the Pacific coast. His predecessors in this regard were Benjamin Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt. Each of them made the swing around the circle in a comfortable special train, but it may be added that the public treasury was not called upon to pay the transportation bills. They were the guests of the railroads all the way, for the railroads like to see their president.

STRAWBERRY DAY AT FAIR JULY 5

Crowds Will Be Fed Berries All Day at the Seattle Exposition.

SEATTLE, June 2.—Strawberries, large and small, red and luscious, will be served to the crowds at the Seattle exposition all day of July 5th.

This is the day set aside as King County day and it is proposed that the strawberries of King shall be as famous in the eyes of the world as the apples of Yakima.

From early morning until late at night strawberries and cream will be on the menu card at the King county building.

A monster red strawberry on wheels will tour the exposition grounds extending the invitation to the crowds to follow on.

The day will open with a parade over the streets in the morning participated in by every manufacturer in King county who is represented by exhibits in the King County building. Many firms will grant half holidays to their employees, the mines will close and King county day promises to carry success with it from the break of day until the gates close at night. Strawberries grow no where in the world better than in King county and on July 5 the strawberry will be king at the exposition. Many manufacturers are planning elaborate banquets for the parade of the morning.

Honor Day today of Sacramento is in Medford on a short business trip.

Here's a Tip

Guess you know what's good, and never miss a treat? Guess "she" knows as much; also how to get it?

Sometimes quarrels will happen. Oh, my! It was her fault, of course, and still it's up to you.

Kidding's no use; besides, Joe can help you. He has the stuff to make her smile—that Special Fruit Melange. It's ice cream, you know, but something extra good. Start with his Orange and Grape Sherbet.

And his candy—so pure and sweet—she'll never resist that.

Last, not least—his cream in any quantities and flavors for that evening party.
