CENTRAL AMERICA IS MAKING TROUBLE

Secretary Knox Faces Many perplexing Problems in Regard to Southern Neighbors.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The recurrent problem of Central America still confronts Secretary Knox's administration like the ghost of the white man's burden, and the state department, which is of a mind to wind up and take a demolishing whack at it, is pausing to know just how to whack.

Secretary Root's policy of benevolent education conducted on the diplomatic settlement work plan has not had the desired effect. The little brown—or are they white?—brothers down on the tropical end of North America are cutting up worse than ever. There are rumors of revolution, riots, disturbances and every variety of civil unrest, which come to Washington in telegrams from consular and diplomatic officers and the banana route from Mobile.

President Zelaya, of Nicaragua, has practically run the American diplomatic representatives out of Nicaragua.

Honduras is in the habitual state of chronic unrest.

Guatemala is in the hands of a despot.

Salvador and Costa Rica are in constant fear of being swallowed up by the neighboring tyrants.

The state department files are full of claims of American citizens. The condition is so unequivocally bad that it seems the question is not now how it is going to end, but when?

Next November the new home of the Bureau of American Republics, which represents 750,000 worth of effort on the part of Andrew Carnegie to induce the Central Americans to enter into a grand movement for peace, will be dedicated to its high mission. It is a nice marble palace and we may be sure that John Barrett will make a great occasion of the dedication, as he invariably does, but the people down in the revolution belt, civil employees and insurgents, and the few plain people, don't seem to care much about it. It is a safe bet that when the Costa Rican, Nicaraguan, Guatemalan, Salvadoran and Honduran ministers wave their silk hats as their particular flag is floated in the breeze, the folks down home will be awaiting a chance to start a revolution in their neighbor's back yard while they keep an eye on the front door.

PORTLAND, July 3.—To offset danger from forest fires resulting from the long dry spell last month, the national forest service, through Chief E. P. Allen, has appointed 40 guards and rangers for service on national ranges, to go into service immediately.

CLUB ROOMS ARE FORMALLY OPENED

Central Point Has Jollification as New Commercial Club Opens for Business.

Members of the Central Point Commercial club, and especially the committee in charge of arrangements, covered themselves with smiles and glory last Thursday evening, the occasion being the reception given to the wives, daughters and invited guests of the members in honor of the formal opening of the new club rooms, says the Herald. By courtesy of Mr. Whiteside, owner of the building in which the club rooms are located, the large store room on the ground floor of the building was thrown open for the evening and all the available room was needed to accommodate the large number present.

An interesting feature of the evening was a series of two-minute "Progress" speeches by a number of ladies and gentlemen, who were called upon by the chair and asked to make impromptu remarks on assigned subjects. Mayor Leever was the first victim of this dark scheme of the committee, his subject being "The City Water System." The mayor spoke interestingly on water, satirizing off with a story of his boyhood days, when Prof. J. W. Merritt one day required him to write a composition on water. The mayor said that experience taught him many things he did not know about so common a subject. He evidently has been learning some things about water ever since then, however, for when he turned to speak of the city water system now in course of construction he showed a familiarity with his subject that practically assures the town one of the most complete and efficient water systems in Southern Oregon.

Mrs. Robnett told why the ladies should organize an auxiliary to the Commercial club. Dr. E. Davis spoke interestingly on city parks. Mrs. Merritt spoke on beautifying the town. I. C. Robnett told how to get 5000 population by 1912. Mrs. Hawk told about what makes a good town. A. L. Atkins spoke on Commercial club work, and Mrs. W. E. Kahler told how the ladies can help boost Central Point.

Light refreshments, consisting of ice cream, punch and cake, were served and the remainder of the evening was passed in a social way.

Members of the band and the ball teams, than whom the town has no better bunch of boosters, were present as special guests of the club.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—At the office of Chief Engineer Hood, of the Southern Pacific company, today it was learned that bids for construction of the Klamath railroad had been received, but have not been opened yet. Mr. Hood said he could not give the exact date of opening, but he thought it would be soon.
