Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PET AVERSION.

I can't help looking at the hats. The summer girls are wearing. And as I look I cannot blame A man for softly swearing. What fantastic rage possessed The mind which this creation So hideous and ill advised Inflicted on the nation?

They surely must have been conceived, With neither judge nor jury. By one who as he brought them forth Was in a nightmare fury. Or by some person crossed in love, Unlucky in his wooing, And took this method just to spite The girls for his undoing.

He must have spent a month or more In fendish cogitating Before he framed the shape for which The people were not waiting. And when the month was at an end, To make the ugly stranger And much less pleasing to the eye, He put in two weeks longer.

We first endure, then pity comes, Swift followed by embracing. The proverb says, and that may be The thing that we are facing. But let us hope we never will With all our hearts adore them, But keep our heads and speak our minds While we have breath to score them.

Not Cashable.

"What kind of a fellow did she marry?"
"Oh, his intentions are all right."
"That doesn't help much."
"It is better than nothing."
"Say, did you ever try to stand off the landlord with them?"

Foiled.

"What are you reading these days, Johnny?"
"Nothin'."
"You ought to be improving your mind."
"Well, pa won't bring home the sporting extra."

His Opinion.

"He married her for her money."
"Did he get it?"
"He did."
"Plenty?"
"Plenty."
"Well, he got cheated anyway."

Wanted Urging.

"What would you say if I were to ask you to marry me?"
"No, of course."
"But why?"
"So you would ask me again."

Rural Repartee.

"Hello, Martin?"
"Hello!"
"What are hogs worth?"
"How much do you weigh?"

Any Old Day.

The nickel slips and slides away
The dime is nimble too.
The dollar never comes to stay.
No wonder we are blue.

We search our pockets for a red
To play the humble slot;
But, though we stand upon our head,
A penny we have not.

To look his fellow in the eye
Should not a man abash;
But what's the answer when the guy
Is bleating for your cash?

If we could always find a sou
Betwixt our pain and thumb,
We'd know the world was lost to view
And here was kingdom come.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Having nothing to regret is a condition of mind that only the mindless can attain to.

The people who are a good deal better than they should be are also objects of suspicion.

The man who doesn't know how and does it is sometimes more devastating than the man who does and doesn't.

One may mean all right and yet be mean all right.

Going broke is easy, but staying broke is hard lines.

Some women would wear out any man's disposition even if it were made of cast iron.

Forty seems a long way off to twenty, but twenty seems but a step backward to forty.

Picturesque Japanese Peasants.

The most characteristic scenery in Japan is not the mountain, on which few Japanese dwell, but the rice field, which is to be found wherever there is a patch of level ground for the field and sufficient water for irrigation. Gentle slopes are made useful by terracing, and the coolly, preparing the ground or cutting his crop, is the true Japanese peasant. He is a picturesque peasant in his blue cotton suit, his broad, conical straw hat and straw overcoat. He is a good natured peasant, absurdly contented with his earnings, though the agricultural laborer earns as little as 8 or 10 cents gold a day. His house is a light wooden frame structure with a heavy thatch, and he loves to plant a lily garden along his roofline. But he always has one thing which separates him from the Chinese and the East Indian—he lives on a platform raised above the ground. No hardened soil for him, no chilly pavement or brick or stone. A wooden floor, a piece of clean matting, a broom and a bathtub the poorest Japanese will always have. —Tokyo Letter to Boston Transcript.

A Deceptive Air.

The Bushby storekeeper surveyed Mr. Leonard with a contemptuous eye and then turned his gaze toward Jimmy Sloane, who was putting packages into the delivery wagon. Jimmy had the leisurely air of one with plenty of time at his disposal. "You want to know how he'd be for your business down below?" said Mr. Gregg slowly. "Yes," said the visitor. "I noticed him yesterday, when that crowd of young fellows were getting the piano into the hall; he seemed to work harder than any of the others. It occurred to me he might like a bigger chance than he has here." "M-m," said the storekeeper. "Well, now, I can't say as to that, of course, but as to his working harder than any of the other boys, I'll tell you what they say, and you can believe it or not, just as you choose." "They all like Jimmy, for he's first rate company, but the truth is that when it comes to lifting, or such work, Jimmy's all take bolt and mighty little hist." —Youth's Companion.

Dark Walls Best For Illumination.

Some scientists who have been making investigations into the part played in the matter of illumination by light and dark walls have come to the conclusion that the dark walls are better fitted for good illumination than the light. In a room where the walls are dark and where the source of light is entirely behind the reader's field of vision a person who reads is impressed with the idea that the room is excellently well illuminated, but if now another light is brought into the room and placed within the field of his vision, though not shining on the paper he is reading, the pupils of his eyes will contract, less light will enter them from the paper he reads, and the reader will be impressed with the idea that the illumination has been reduced and the paper is becoming darker. These scientists say that the experiments show that if the walls are light colored the efficiency of the illumination may actually be diminished. —Pathfinder.

The Picture in Disguise.

Of the strange vicissitudes through which many of the world's famous pictures have passed perhaps none was odder than that of "The Picture in Disguise," a magnificent painting that now adorns the residence of Lord Leigh in Warwickshire, England. This remarkable picture for many years appeared to be merely a painting of flowers. The floral study was, however, finally pronounced by an astute art dealer to be in reality a mask for another painting. With the permission of the owner he caused the painting of flowers gradually to be removed, whereupon there was discovered underneath a very fine portrait of Charles I. by Van Dyck. While no authentic record of this masterpiece has been found, it is supposed that the portrait was disguised by some royalist in order to guard against its destruction by Roundheads during the revolution. —Boston Post.

Bonheur's Humor.

Mlle. Rosa Bonheur (Rosa stood for Rosalie) was not without a sense of humor, so it is told of her that when presiding over a school of design in Paris, the pupils being girls, the artist was disgusted with the class because, imitative of their teacher, the young women had cut their hair short. "Goodness," cried Rosa Bonheur, "how horrid you all look! This is not a class of boys. You silly creatures, let your hair alone and do your best so as to retain all the advantages of your sex."

Easy Cure.

"There is a man who is always looking for trouble."
"Well, it's easy enough to cure him of that habit."
"How?"
"Get him put on the police force." —Exchange.

Sarcastic.

"Do you sleep with your mouth open?" inquired a doctor.
"I've never noticed," was the sarcastic reply. "but I'll look tonight when I'm asleep."

OLD TIME JAIL BREAKER IS AT LAST RECAPTURED

SALEM, Or., July 10.—C. W. James, superintendent of the Oregon State Penitentiary, returned to Salem Wednesday having in custody William A. King, who escaped from the state prison in this city ten years ago and who has since been at liberty. King has been in the county Jail at Big Timber, Mont., since his arrest by the Montana authorities some two weeks ago. King was somewhat under the influence of liquor at the time of his arrest in a country saloon, 20 miles from Big Timber, but he had not betrayed himself while intoxicated, as reported. On the contrary, his identity was revealed to Sheriff Falang by a man supposed to be a gambler, who knew King in Eastern Oregon and cultivated his acquaintance when he met him in Montana. Afterward he went to the Sheriff with the information that H. Yost was an escaped convict, whose real name was William A. King, and that the State of Oregon had a standing offer of $500 reward for his return. The sheriff took the hint and went to the little station indicated by King's false friend, where he found the ex-convict and placed him under arrest. The sheriff had been told by the informer that King carried two guns and was desperate. When Falang arrested him the latter was not armed, but there was evidence that he had recently pawned two guns to get money on which to celebrate the Fourth.

MAIL ORDER HUSBAND BOTH A REAL ONE AND A JOKE

CHICAGO, July 10.—Ella Simmons, a mountain maid from East Tennessee, was wooed from Chicago by mail by one Mr. Jones. He sent her $30 to pay her fare here. Then they were to marry. She had never been ten miles from home, but she wanted to marry. Concealing her plans from her parents she ran away. She was first met by an agent of the Young Woman's Christian Association at a railway station. She showed twenty love letters and a photograph. The police recognized the picture as that of E. F. Hannell, head of a mail order house and married for years. He was brought before the girl and admitted the truth of her story. He looked upon it all as a joke. His wife does not. He gave the girl $50 to pay her way home. "I loved him," though I had never seen him," said Miss Simmons ruefully, "but $50 will take me back home and buy a new dress besides. I am going to tell other girls that men who make love by mail don't mean it."

TEN REASONS WHY You Should Be a Reader of The Pacific Monthly

- 1st. It is the leading magazine of Western America, published on the Pacific coast edited by western men and its entire contents are Western. With pen, brush and camera, it tells the story of the wonderful progress of the West.
- 2nd. No other section of the entire world is experiencing such a rapid industrial and commercial growth as that section of the United States west of the Rockies. It is a duty you owe to yourself to keep informed—The Pacific Monthly completely covers the field.
- 3rd. There are opportunities for the extension of practically every line of business in this territory, and The Pacific Monthly tells of these opportunities.
- 4th. If you are looking for a chance to invest or locate—commerce, farming, orcharding or professional work, if you are worn, tired or in ill health, seeking rest or reasonable, The Pacific Monthly will give you a thousand valuable hints.
- 5th. Here also you can get close to nature. The great snow-capped mountains, in all their rugged grandeur, the boundless plains and the virgin forests, "God's Country," untarnished by the hand of man. Do you not wish to spend a few hours each month with us?
- 6th. The best of western literature to be found in the Pacific Monthly. Live topics of THE DAY, stories of progress and of opportunities, the Romance of the mountains and the plains, always intensely human.
- 7th. One never tires of beautiful pictures and the Pacific Monthly is famous for its illustrations, always a veritable picture book of Western scenery, from Mexico to Alaska and from Denver to the coast. No expense is spared in securing the most striking photos for reproduction in colors and halftones.
- 8th. The Pacific Monthly should be in every home. From cover to cover it is clean wholesome reading of an educational nature. It is particularly interesting and valuable both to teacher and students.
- 9th. Look upon your map, note the great area west of the Rockies, think of the wonderful resources of this section of the country—thousands of acres of agriculture land, billions of feet of standing timber, mineral riches beyond comprehension, extending to the shores of the mighty Pacific, the highway to the Orient—Do you not want to know more about this marvelous country?
- 10th. A spirit of optimism prevails throughout the west that lends life and vigor to all. That is why the Pacific Monthly is different. It comes to you each month breathing this spirit of the west. It will put the red blood into your veins—try it. Sample copies at the Tribune office where subscriptions can be left.
