MAY SAVE LAKE FROM USE AS A CITY DUMP

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Aug. 4.

The one subject for discussion among the taxpayers and residents generally of this city is the disposition of the sewage when the proposed system is built. A canvas of the city shows that the sentiment is strongly against dumping into Lake Ewama. Already J. G. Pierce, one of the heavy taxpayers, has announced that in case the council should persist in using the lake as a cesspool he would take the necessary steps to get a restraining order. Public sentiment is with Pierce and in case of legal action he will not be compelled to bear the burden of the litigation alone.

Since the public has had time to give the matter consideration and has placed itself on record as being opposed to using the lake for a dumping place it is believed that the council will change its plans and install septic tanks.

THIRSTY MAN TRY TO COWER COW

Dr. Wheat Spends Night Amid Wilds of Mt. Ashland—Suffered Considerably from Thirst.

Dr. J. G. Wheat, physician, artist, lecturer and traveler, who has been camping in these parts since April, essayed the scaling of Grizzly Peak last Thursday afternoon, says the Tidings. Armed with nothing but a kodak and a couple of sandwiches, he was ferried across Bear creek at the Oak street terminal at 1 o'clock sharp, and struck out for the summit, without companion or guide, where he arrived at 7:30. But he had forsaken the water wagon and here the pangs of thirst overtook him, for on the summit there are none of those bright, sparkling springs you read about. Hearing the tinkling of a bell, he undertook to round up a milk cow on the reservation and assuage his thirst on lacteal fluid, but bossy took fright at the doctor's apparition and plunged into the jungle. However, it was a milk or water alternative, and the doctor followed the sounding bell and tinkling gymbol in the darkness, amid hostile manzanita and poison oak brush, until he providentially ran amuck of a spring. Here he drank his fill, lit a fire and pitched his tent for the night, retraced his footsteps to the summit the next morning, snapped a kodak or two of the surroundings, leaving at about 8 a.m., and arriving in town at noon, Friday, after a strenuous outing that would have taxed the endurance of a much younger man.

MEN LOST ON SHASTA BEAT SEARCHERS HOME

McCLOUD, (Siskiyou Co.), Aug. 4.—The two young men, Herbert Game and Carl Jones, who were reported lost on Mt. Shasta, returned safely to McCloud Friday night. The searching parties did not immediately receive word of their return and were still out on the mountain Saturday. Their camp fires were plainly seen a short distance above the timber line Friday night. Game and Jones report having reached the summit and they spent the rest of their five days' absence hunting. They did not see any of the searching parties and were ignorant that they had caused any uneasiness.

This is the worst season for climbing Mount Shasta, as the snow is soft and melting.

Don't forget the amateur night at the Bijou (Friday night). Something doing.

APPRAISEMENT OF TIMBER A MISTAKE

Commissioner of General Land Office Discusses Abuses of Regulation Recently Made.

Commissioner of the General Land Office Fred Dennett, who is in Portland, admits that a mistake has been made in changing of the manner of disposing of the timber claims. That the sale of the claims under the appraisal program is a failure is admitted, but Mr. Dennett does not state whether the Interior Department will recede from its position.

"Relative to the regulation imposed by the General Land Office, a short time ago, to sell the timber lands through an appraised valuation," he said, "I must admit that it has not operated to my entire satisfaction, although at the time the order was promulgated it was considered to be the most feasible solution of the problem of the disposition of lands of this character. There is no question but that the act of June 3, 1878, commonly known as the timber and stone law, has outlived its usefulness, and there ought to be a new law passed to meet present conditions. Those who drafted the old law were doubtless sincere in their intentions to protect the forests from fire and devastation, because the debates on the measure indicate that one of the principal purposes was to place the lands in individual ownership with the idea that the entrymen would take an interest in protecting their holdings from forest fires; but it appears that those who were thus actuated by honest motives, never took into consideration the multitudinous abuses that have been heap-

ROAD UP SHASTA IS SURVEYED

Crew of Men With Teams and Scrapers Will Be Placed at Work During Next Few Days.

SISSON, (Siskiyou Co.), August 4.—The survey of the automobile road up the eastern slope of Mount Shasta to the McGuinness ranch above the timber line was completed last week. A crew of men with teams and scrapers will be set to work before the close of this week and the road will be completed by the close of the season. Work would have been begun much earlier, but a delay was caused in securing the right of way. Nine miles of the new road will be built. A part of the present wagon road is good enough for automobiles.

The mountain climbing season is now at its best. Several parties have already made the ascent of Mount Shasta and from now until late in September not a day will pass without some one making the big climb. The famous mountain is a valuable asset of Sisson and is the cause of many tourists coming here. The number of tourists this summer is greater than was ever known. Hotels and Summer resorts are filled to their capacity.

ed upon the law through the medium of speculators and fraudulent entries. At the time the present appraisal system was adopted, this step was taken after a careful canvass of the situation by the best legal advice at our command, and I understand that an effort is about to be made here Oregon to test the matter in the federal courts. I hope sincerely that this will be done, as it may result in solving many intricate problems incident thereto."
