THE FAUCET OF PRAYER

By Dean Collins in the Dallas Observer.

Sing "Hey!" and likewise "Ho!" for Colonel Hofer
And laud him all ye creatures here below, for
He hath at last found means to loose the tap
That from the rain clouds draws the aqueous sap;
He scales the azure dome to apex dizzy,
Prods up J. Pluvius and gets him busy,
Proving himself more adequate in that field
Than hath the great rainmaker, Mr. Hatfield.
Sing "Hey!" and likewise "Ho!" for Colonel Hofer
He is the man on whom to bet your dough, for
He saw the way to break the parching drought,
Declaring prayer would bring a waterspout;
If men would pray with but the proper power
And show the Lord how bad they need a shower,
The heavens would doubtless open at their calling,
And gentle rain begin at once a-falling.
Sing "Hey!" and likewise "Ho!" for Colonel Hofer
The testing of his method was not slow, for
The men and eke the maids of Salem town
Forthwith prepared to bring the rainfall down;
Prayers from long years' disuse gone all to seed
Were polished up to meet the moment's need;
Sooth 'twere beyond description's brightest power—
The great Salemity that ruled the hour.
Sing "Hey!" and likewise "Ho!" for Colonel Hofer
The subsequent events proved he must know, for
The winging prayers, with Salem's passion fired,
Brought down the rain that they so much desired.
True, it was little better than a splatter,
But why should carping critics let that matter?
It was, they must admit—if prayer avail them,
A darned good job for such a town as Salem.
Sing "Hey!" and likewise "Ho!" for Colonel Hofer
In future let him be the man to go for
When specified conditions are desired,
Or special brands of weather are required.
Deposed is Beals, who could but tell to us
The future plans of great J. Pluvius.
For Hofer's plan's a better one, because it
Controls the rain by prayer as by a faucet.

The Intelligent Censor.

Some years ago a young man of St. Petersburg, Ivan Fedowski, quarreled with his sweetheart and then took his grief out of the country. About a year after he wrote to the girl asking her to "make up" and telling her if she forgave him to insert a "personal" to that effect in a St. Petersburg paper not later than a certain date. The girl was repentant, too, and she promptly got the "personal" ready, and all would have been well had it not been for the lynx eyed censor, who believed it to be some sort of nihilist message and refused to allow its publication. After awhile, however, the stern official was convinced that the "personal" was harmless, and it was printed four days late. It was a little while after when the girl received word that her lover, having failed to see the message in print on the day he had set, had set himself two days before it saw the light.

Kept His Feet Dry.

Extraordinary conduct on the part of two men upon seeing the body of a woman in the water was disclosed at an inquest held at the Victory inn, on the Hoags Back, Surrey. A farm laborer named Sidney Smith missed his mother one morning and on searching found her lying face upward in a roadside pond. He ran off, and another laborer named Matthews, who passed the pond, also ran away, neither making any effort to pull her out. Matthews told the coroner he did not do so, as he did not know if he would be doing right.
The Coroner—The poor creature might have not been dead at that time. You could easily have got her out, I suppose?
"I should have had to go up to my eyes in the water."—London Mail.

THE GREAT PHAROAH.

Horemheb Did More For Egypt, Perhaps, Than Any Other.

Horemheb at the time of his accession was forty-five years of age, full of energy and vigor and passionately anxious to have a free hand in the carrying out of his schemes for the reorganization of the government. It was therefore with joy that in about the year 1350 B. C. he sailed up to Thebes in order to claim the crown.

Had he lived longer he might have been famous as a conqueror as well as an administrator, though old age might retard and tired bones refuse their office. As it is, however, his name is written sufficiently large in the book of the world's great men, and when he died, about 1315 B. C., after a reign of some thirty-five years, he had done more for Egypt than had almost any other pharaoh. He found the country in the wildest disorder, and he left it the master of itself and ready to become once more the master of the empire which Akhnaton's doctrine of peace and good will had lost.

Under his direction the purged worship of the old gods, which for him meant only the maintenance of some-time proved customs, had gained the mastery over the chimerical worship of Aton. Without force or violence he substituted the practical for the visionary, and to Amun, and order his grateful subjects were able to cry, "The sun of him who knew thee not has set, but he who knows thee shines; the sanctuary of him who assailed thee is overwhelmed in darkness, but the whole earth is now in light."—Arthur E. P. Weigall in Century.

The Reason.

"I wonder why sailors are always dry?"
"Bety" called "sail" so much makes them thirsty, I s'pose."—St. Louis Republic.

Man's Superiority.
"Woman," exclaimed the suffragette, "is the equal of man in every respect."
"Oh, I don't know," replied a man in the audience; "it takes a man to put an angleworm on a hook."—Detroit Free Press.
