PROMINENT MEN.

Portland August 17-20. About 300 delegates from all parts of the United States will be in attendance. Delegations from some of the states will come in special cars. Oregon mutual insurance companies have arranged for the entertainment of visitors. Portland and nearby parts of the state will be shown them and a trip up the Columbia river will give them an idea of Oregon scenery.

To Entertain Japs.

Extensive plans are now being made for the reception and entertainment of the Japanese excursionists who will visit the northwest during the early part of September. The party is expected to spend two days in Portland and they will be extensively entertained while here. A reception committee has been named by the Portland commercial bodies that will take charge of the representatives of the land of Nippon and see that nothing is overlooked in making them welcome. The visitors are very prominent in the commercial life of Japan and hope to bring about closer industrial relations between the two countries.

A famous Oregon pioneer, Dr. John

McLaughlin, will be remembered on September 5 at Oregon City, when his old house, now restored and moved to a public park, will be dedicated. This grand old man of Oregon, who did so much for the early settlers of this state and made personal sacrifices to assist others, is at least to have public honor paid him for his work. September 3 is the date of his death, and on the following Sunday a memorial service in his honor will be held, and the old dwelling, where he lived for many years, dedicated as a memorial of his kindly life. The services promise to be largely attended.

Many prominent Oregonians are in attendance at the national irrigation congress at Spokane this week. Governor Benson and the commercial bodies of the state have appointed a large number of delegates who are interested in furthering irrigation work in the west. Many left the first of the week to attend the sessions of the congress.

Soundings made by the officials of the Port of Portland during the past week show that the Columbia river from the mouth of the Willamette to the ocean is in better shape for navigation by deep vessels than has been the case for some time. Dredges are working at a few places where shoals have been located, but on the whole, little work is necessary. That there is plenty of water in the river is shown by the fact that the British steamship Saveric, drawing 27 feet, was dispatched during the week, going down the river without delay.
