HOW TO ACQUIRE A WATER RIGHT

State Engineer Issued Bulletin Calling Attention to New Method of Getting Water Right.

John H. Lewis, state engineer, has issued a circular telling how to appropriate water. The instructions were issued on account of the lack of knowledge on the part of the general public, many believing the old method of posting a notice still to be in effect. The law reads now:

"Any person, association or corporation hereafter intending to acquire the right of the beneficial use of any waters shall, before commencing the construction, enlargement or extension of any ditch, canal or other distributing or controlling works, or performing any work in connection with said construction, or proposed appropriation make an application to the state engineer for a permit to make such appropriation. Any person who shall wilfully divert or use water to the detriment of others without compliance with law shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. The possession or use of water, except when a right use is acquired in accordance with law, shall be prima facie evidence of the guilt of the person using it." Sec. 45, Laws of 1909.

"It shall be a misdemeanor to use, store, or divert any water until after the issuance of permit to appropriate such waters." Sec. 66, Laws of 1909.

Applications.

Applications should be made upon forms prescribed by the state engineer (not in duplicate).

An application is not a permit to appropriate water until after its approval by the state engineer.

Three different application forms are provided, one for original or new diversions, another for the enlargements or extensions of existing works, and a third for the construction of reservoir, and storage of unappropriated waters. These can be secured without charge by addressing the state engineer, Salem, Or.

A permit to construct a reservoir and store surplus water does not grant the right to divert and use such stored water. Separate applications should, therefore, be made for each of these purposes.

Application for a permit to divert stored water when released in a natural stream is known as a secondary permit. It need not be made at the time of application for a reservoir permit. Such application when made should refer to such reservoir for a supply of water and be accompanied by documentary evidence that an agreement has been entered into with the owner of the reservoir for a permanent and sufficient interest in said reservoir to impound enough water for the purposes set forth in said application.

Each application should be forwarded to the state engineer, accompanied by the necessary maps and fees. Strict compliance with the rules governing the submission of maps is important. Defective applications will be returned for correction without loss of priority.

Convict Mutiny Narrowly Averted at State Prison.

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 19.—Last night Mike Conroy, convict No 872, at the state prison, knocked down one of the guards in the courtyard and managed to escape. A mutiny was only averted by firing amongst the other prisoners. Several were badly wounded. A posse was at once organized and parties are scouring the neighborhood. Late last night Conroy was turned over to the police by a man named Martin living in the outskirts of the city. It seems he once befriended Conroy, who took refuge in his house. When Conroy learned that Martin's family was destitute he gave himself up to his friend so that he could get the reward offered. See this heart-stirring picture at the Savoy tonight in connection with other pictures of rare merit.

Do not miss tonight's program, which is instructive, full of thrills and laughs.
