Banner Bill at The Savoy.

Follow the crowd to "The Savoy" tonight and you will see an excellent bill of the latest moving pictures, not pictures shown in the city weeks ago, and advertised as the latest. The headliner tonight is Vitagraph's high art film, "The Sword and the King." The subject is of medieval times and deals with a tyrant and an oppressed people. The story is well constructed and told in a stirring manner by clever actors. The scenic arrangements are beautiful and consistent with the times.

"Judge Not" is strong drama of home life, teaching the moral, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." The story is simple yet a strong one and is clearly told, holding your attention from start to finish.

"Borrowed Clothes" is one of those pleasing comedies full of laughs and abounding with mirth.

Entire change of program tomorrow night. One dime.
